1994: A Year Of Changing Rules

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A lot of "rules" changed in 1994, in more than one way.

Unless the rest of this winter exceeds last year's heavy snowfalls and icy storms, the beginning of 1994 can be expected to be used as a benchmark, or a rule, for describing a bad winter storm.

The year started with one of the worst series of winter storms to hit the state in recent times, locking people in homes for days.

Roofs collapsed under the heavy concentrated mix of snow and freezing rain which exceeded stress weights on a number of buildings, or building additions.

Roads, such as Rt. 30 through Lancaster were locked under a thick covering of ice for days. Vehicles left stuck in the snow along the berms of highways after minor and major accidents were common sights.

Road surfaces were so covered over with snow and ice that the only way to determine the proper lanes of travel on major routes was to follow tire tracks grooved in the trails cut by plows.

A lot of snow plows have been sold since.

The unusually heavy, late snow cover insulated the ground, and certain insects became more of a problem in the spring.

Some fruit growers also suffered not only from tree damage. For example, there was virtually no peach crop. Thrips almost destroyed the yield and quality of some large strawberry fields.

However, the wetness and coolness of later summer helped sweet corn become probably as much of a bumper crop as ever, causing lower than normal local market prices.

After the wet spring, and favor-

Mifflin County Holds Annual Meeting

LEWISTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — It was a plea for thoughtful leadership, said Dr. Herbert Cole, professor of agricultural sciences at Penn State, after his talk to members and friends at the Mifflin County Cooperative Extension Association annual dinner meeting.

With all that agriculture is facing, Cole said his message was an appeal for agriculture to chart its own future through careful planning and leadership.

Cole said Pennsylvania's largest industry is undergoing a tremendous amount of change and the challenge is to see if we will accept the challenge to chart our own course.

With less than two percent of the people in the U.S. involved in production agriculture and more and more people moving to the country, farmers need to protect their right to farm.

"There are already laws in some areas that forbid farm machinery on the roads at certain times. There are odor restrictions. Non-farm neighbors have preconceived ideas as to what a farm is. Who will determine acceptable farming practices?"

Cole believes so strongly in the importance of ag awareness that he serves on the board of Pennsylvania Foundation for Better Living, the group that sponsors Ag in the Classroom. He cites a survey of seventh and eighth graders who could follow the food chain only as far as the supermarket, and in another state, a high-profile official is known to have said, "Why all the concern over agriculture? We have supermarkets." With results such as these, Cole said, they have no way of understanding

Industrial Executive Develops Memorial To Farmer Father With Model Cow Collection

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — You wouldn't think the education manager of employee benefits at Armstrong World Industries would have anything to do with, or know anything about, cows. But it can safely be said that Richard Bohn, 55, knows cows because he has more than 500 (he actually lost count of how many) cows in his house east of the the city.

Of course these are model and toy cows of all sizes and from world-wide destinations. They eat nothing and create no morning and evening chores because they are made of porcelain, china, ceramics, metal, wood, cardboard, chocolate, wax, composition, chalk, Celluloid, plastic, and wood. Some are in books and some are in pictures on the wall.

They make no noise. But they do take up a lot of display space in the living room, bedroom, kitchen and basement. Oh yes, on the mailbox in front of the house too. All have one thing in common: they look like real cows.

"I limit my hobby of cow collecting to those that look like cows," Bohn said. "For me, it has to be realistic. I don't like holes in the back and the cute look. Cows have a certain dignity about them,

Thinking Of The Farm Show

At this time of year in Pennsylvania a large number of farmers and agribusiness people think about the Pennsylvania Farm Show. Everyone at Lancaster Farming joins this thinking.

In this issue we get a jump on our coverage. Starting on page C1, the interview with the Bennecoff Family in Berks County is the first of a number of on-farm interviews with farmers who plan to bring livestock, produce, and home-made items to the 79th State Farm Show.

Also this week on pages A17-A21 we have the layout of the show buildings and the judging and meeting schedules. This will help you in your advance planning to visit the show.

Next week is our annual Farm Show Issue with many on-farm features, expanded coverage of the highlights of the show, and advertising messages from the commercial exhibitors who invite you to visit them during the show. In addition, meeting and judging schedules are featured along with the building layout.

Judging starts on Friday, but the show does not open to the public until Saturday, January 7. To accommodate our early publication date to meet the opening of the Farm Show, we have early deadlines for advertising and news stories for the January 6 issue. They are as follows:

- Office closed for New Years Holiday — Monday 1/2.
- Public Sale Ads — 5 p.m., Friday, 12/30.
- Mailbox Markets — 5 p.m., Friday, 12/30.
- General News — Noon, Wednesday, 1/4.
- Classified Section C Ads — 5 p.m., Tuesday, 1/3.
- All Other Classifieds — 9 a.m., Wednesday, 1/4.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 28, 1994
EXPORT DEMAND HAS DROPPED OFF FOR WHEAT SO FAR THIS WEEK AND SIGNS OF LIGHT PROFIT TAKING WAS REFLECTED IN LOWER WHEAT PRICES. CORN PRICES WERE MIXED BUT SHOWED SOME STRENGTH ON NEWS OF CHINA'S OVERNIGHT PURCHASE AND THE HIGHER WEEKLY EXPORT INSPECTION NUMBERS. MODERATE DECLINES IN SOYBEAN PRICES WERE DUE TO PROFIT TAKING ON THE BOARD AND INCREASED FARMER SELLING. WHEAT 2 TO 8 CENTS LOWER. CORN MIXED. SORGHUM 1 TO 2 CENTS HIGHER EXCEPT GULF RAIL DOWN 4 CENTS. SOYBEANS 2 TO 5 CENTS LOWER. LOWER

EXPORT SALES HAVE PRESSURED WHEAT PRICES BUT INDICATIONS THAT CHINA NEEDS ADDITIONAL WHEAT LIMITED DECLINES. WINTER WHEAT IS REPORTED IN GOOD CONDITION AND FAVORABLE GROWING WEATHER IS A FACTOR IN FALLING WHEAT PRICES. OVERSEAS CORN SALES HAVE BEEN GOOD THE PAST COUPLE OF WEEKS AND CHINA'S REPORTED SALE OVERNIGHT GAVE PRICES A BOOST. SOME FUND BUYING TOOK PLACE AND TUESDAY'S STRONG WEEKLY EXPORT INSPECTION FIGURES FOR CORN ADDED TO THE UPWARD TREND. CORN AND SOYBEAN PRICES RECEIVED SOME PRESSURE AS COUNTRY SELLING INCREASED DUE TO THE RECENT CLIMB IN PRICES AND FARMERS ARE IN NEED OF YEAR END TAX MONEY. SOYBEAN MEAL PRICES FELL SLIGHTLY WHICH ALSO PUT PRESSURE ON BEANS HOWEVER, CHINA'S OVERNIGHT SOYBEAN PURCHASE LIMITED DECLINES.

JANUARY 2-8, 1995

TRIVIA DAY, JANUARY 4.

HANSEL MONDAY

According to old Scottish custom, the first Monday of the new year was the time to give children and servants a small gift. Literally, something given into the hands of someone else, the gift itself was less important than the good luck it betokened. The hand-sel was popular as a New Year's gift from the fourteenth century to the nineteenth century, but it had a broader application as a gift given to mark any new situation, not just the new year. The hand-sel continues today in the tradition of presenting a housewarming gift to bring good luck into the new home.

He gives twice who gives soon.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Try non-stick vegetable spray to quiet squeaky door hinges, wheels, etc.

QUICK BROWN BREAD

1 cup all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
2 cups whole wheat flour
1 cup buttermilk
1 cup dark molasses
1 cup raisins

Combine all-purpose flour, sugar, salt, and baking soda in a large mixing bowl. Add whole wheat flour, buttermilk, and molasses and beat on medium speed with an electric mixer until just blended. Stir in raisins. Pour batter into a greased 9x5-inch loaf pan and bake at 350° F for 50 minutes to one hour, or until tester inserted in the center comes out clean.

Makes 1 loaf.

Father Time

To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven:

A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted;

A time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up;

A time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance;

A time to cast away stones, and time to gather stones together, a time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing;

A time to get, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away;

A time to get, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away;

A time to rend, and a time to sew; a time to keep silence, and a time to speak;

A time to love, and a time to hate; a time of war, and a time of peace.

Editor:

The silo gas article on page B2 of the December 24 issue of LANCASTER FARMING written by Gay Brownlee of Somerset County surely caught my attention and hopefully the attention of every other family who uses tower silos. The tragic near-death incident shows us how much we need education on biological hazards in handling stored high-moisture organic matter. This tragedy has been repeated so often that we MUST do more, especially when children are involved with the work we farmers do. The writer of the article told the story very well but failed to suggest how to prevent future incidents. Please allow me to help from my training and extensive experience with tower silos.

To Make New Year's Resolutions

Every year at this time it is the custom to make New Year's resolutions.

The key is in keeping them. According to experts, most resolutions are broken very quickly into the new year.

In order for resolutions to be successful, they need to be few in number, something you really want to change and a reward system is in place to re-enforce doing the resolution.

Some New Year's resolutions you may want to consider are:

Allocate at least 4 hours a week to record keeping.

Do not allow work areas to become cluttered.

Place tools in their proper place after use.

Keep grass and weeds mowed around buildings.

Start an effective rodent control program.

Spend more time with family in family activities.

Institute and follow a safety program especially for pesticides and tractors and equipment.

1995 will bring us many challenges and opportunities. Take a few minutes and reflect on the past so you may see ways to improve the future.

To Plan For College Expenses

The Pennsylvania Tuition Account Program enables people to lock in a price today to pay for tomorrow's tuition at any of Pennsylvania's 32 state-owned and state-related universities and community colleges.

The Tuition Account Program (TAP) allows families to pay for a student's entire tuition in a lump sum, or in part by purchasing TAP credits or units.

Units reduce the financial pressure on families by enabling them to pay a smaller price for their children's future tuition. Twenty tuition units equal one TAP credit.

Twenty-four TAP credits equal the annual tuition for an undergraduate student at any of the state owned or state related universities. For community colleges, one TAP credit equals one credit hour. People may apply their TAP credits to any licensed or accredited college, university, or trade school in the country.

A student who receives a scholarship is entitled to a refund equal to the amount of the scholarship. If a student decides not to attend college, TAP credits may be transferred to another eligible beneficiary or the purchaser may receive a refund.

For information on this program, call (800) 440-4000.

To Handle Cattle Correctly

The Beef Promotion and Research Board recently completed a study called the "National Beef Quality Audit." What emerged was a wide range of problems that need to be addressed if the beef industry is to remain competitive with other meats.

The major complaints of retailers and restaurant owners were related to waste (waste fat and trimming required due to injection blemishes and bruises) and lack of uniformity in size of cuts, etc.

Packers were concerned with problems directly impacting their profits. Their top 10 concerns in order of importance: 1. Hide defects. 2. Injection site blemishes. 3. Excess carcass weights. 4. Bruises. 5. Low quality from implant use. 6. Condemned livers. 7. Not enough choice. 8. Too many yield grade 4/5. 9. Low uniformity. 10. Dark cutters.

The study also looked at the economic impact of these quality problems. All together, we waste $280 a head.

Quite a few of the problems need to be handled at the farm. Harold Harpster, Penn State animal scientist, said we need to be feeding the right type of cattle, marketing them at the proper end-point, and practicing careful health and handling management. Gentle handling and injecting cattle only in the neck muscle instead of the rump are two simple changes we can make to help the industry.

Background Scripture:
Matthew 8:1-9:8

Devotional Reading:
Luke 4:16-21

We are so accustomed to visualizing the crowds that followed Jesus, that we tend to forget that "when the Gadarenes saw Him," there were many who wanted Him to get out of town right away. If Jesus were walking in the flesh through our world today, I think he'd get the same mixed reception: acceptance from some, rejection from others.

In the past when I have read this passage, I have often wondered why, if Jesus got rid of the two troublesome demons, the Gadarenes would have begged him to "leave the neighborhood." Surely, being rid of these two disturbers of the peace was beneficial to that community! And, if the Gadarenes had heard anything of the miracles Jesus performed on the other side of the lake, wouldn't they want him to stay in their midst and do likewise?

Not necessarily. If it were merely a matter of having Jesus around to do healings, I'm sure they would have wanted Him to stay. But the Gadarenes must have suspected that there was more to this man than His miracles of healing. The two demon-possessed men said aloud what other Gadarenes were possibly thinking: "What do you have to do with us, O Son of God?" (8:29).

MORE THAN MIRACLES

Up to this point in Matthew, only one other person has identified Jesus as the Son of God—in Matthew 4, the tempter challenges Jesus, saying, "If you are the Son of God..." The Gadarenes must have realized that Jesus was more than a miracle worker. Being in His presence was like being in the presence of God. As I write this, it is Halloween and it occurs to me that in the midst of ghosts and goblins for a really profound, fear nothing can compare with being in the presence of God. That's scary! "Scary" in the only way that humans ought ever to be afraid.

Another reason the Gadarenes wanted to banish Jesus from their neighborhood was He had a habit of making things and people whole. In our passage Jesus has performed several miracles of healing and cleansing.

TORMENT OR HEALING?

It appears that Jesus would be a good man to have around, but the Gadarenes looked beneath the healings and discerned that Jesus brought something else to their midst—wholeness. Lots of people would like to be rid of physical pain and impairments, but that doesn't mean they want to be whole. Wholeness is a condition, not of the outside, but of the inside. It determines the way we live, what we value, and what our lives are all about. Some people and some communities don't really want wholeness or holiness, for they either thrive on their brokenness or have become housebroken to it. To people such as these the presence of the Christ is seen as torment rather than healing.

"Faith" here is trust, not just belief. These people are healed and helped because of their trust in His authority. "Lord, if you will," says a leper, "you can make me clean." Note the authority in Jesus' reply: "I will; be clean." The Roman centurion comes to Jesus, not to ask Him to come to his house to heal the paralyzed servant, "but only say the word and my servant will be healed." And Jesus replies, "Go, let it be done for you as you have believed" (8:8, 13). To the two Gadarene demoniacs He said simply, "Go" and the demons were cast out. To the second paralytic Jesus says, "Your sins are forgiven" (9:1-8).

But the scribes question His authority and so Jesus says to them—and to us "But that you may know that the Son of Man has authority on earth to forgive sins," and He turns to the paralytic and says, "Rise, take up your bed and go home" (9:6). What does the paralytic do? Does he ask to see Jesus' ordination certificate or a license from the state medical board: Does he discuss doctrine and creeds with Jesus? No, Matthew simply says, "he rose and went home." He trusted in Jesus, acted on that trust, and was healed!

Jesus makes the same offer to each of us today: "That you may know that the Son of Man has authority on earth..." Ask what you want in His service and do what He tells you to do.

able growing conditions in the early summer, the wet, cool late summer conditions promoted the growth of algae and fungus which affected a variety of agricultural and crops and turf grasses.

A late blight, caused by a fungus, devastated almost the entire potato crop in some counties, making them eligible for low-interest federal disaster loans.

Otherwise, field corn, silage, hay and soybeans grew well, with the large harvest causing corn and grain prices to drop, but that somewhat offset low livestock prices.

Hog prices dropped to bankruptcy levels; beef prices lowered dangerously; dairy prices remained somewhat steady, though unpredictable.

Republican Takeover

Another change in rule came in the political arena, when the November elections saw Republicans emerge victorious in many contests, especially at the state and national level, overthrowing Democratic power.

Among the political issues that can be expected to be affected by the change in power are environmental concerns.

The state Republican agenda has been to promote the use of negotiation in resolving environmental problems and penalties; to set standards for cleanup according to uses of the property; and to consider the realistic dangers to the human population and the general surrounding environment, as opposed to creating and enforcing across-the-board standards.

In fact, a series of bipartisan proposals coming out of the state Senate Environmental and Energy Committee to create a new regulatory system to effect such cooperation failed, but only because a less liberal proposal supported by House Democrats, Gov. Casey and outgoing DER chairman Arthur Davis was offered as a stalemate.

It is expected that with a Republican governor and Republican control in both branches of the Legislature, the proposal will be resubmitted this session and probably succeed.

Local tax reform, which was expected to be addressed this past legislative session, again was stayed for lack of consensus and support.

Proponents continue to urge for allowing local taxing authorities, such as school districts and county governments, to assess an income tax on residents as a means to offset the unjust requirement of only assessing real estate taxes to fund government services.

Reform is thought to benefit the agricultural community, because of its inherent use of high overhead properties, with relatively minimal annual profit margins. Currently, local taxes are assessed on the properties, not the small profit margins.

Landowner Rights Or Water Protection?

Just recently, a legal ruling for an Erie County landowner determined that he lost a relatively long legal battle to restore existing, but clogged drain tiles, and to complete a water-draining project his father started years ago on the family farm.

Although some have been touting the ruling as a defeat for landowner rights, others have stated that the issues involved in this particular legal battle are not really relevant to the majority of landowners.

In this case, a son was stopped from attempting to continue a project his father started, but which lay idle for about 20 years, until the son decided to fulfill the goals of the old USDA-approved farm plan his father had developed in order to create more crop land.

When the project was originally approved by the USDA, the federal philosophy was to turn as much land as possible into crop production.

Federal grants and loans were made available to landowners to conduct such wetlands-draining activities as installing underground tiles.

Since then, much has changed, especially with water supplies being threatened, and increased human demands on supplies. Likewise, the USDA's policy of promoting the destruction of wetlands has been reversed.

In fact, landowners are now being encouraged to consider how they might be able to use wetlands, or construct wetlands at certain areas because of the cleansing ability that these types of ecosystems have on water — breaking down complex molecules, removing heavy metals, and converting nitrogen into an innocuous form.

Water Uses

The Susquehanna River Basin Commission, a federal-interstate compact with authority over the flows of water in the entire drainage of the Susquehanna River, has been operating a research site in Dauphin County with strong farmer/landowner cooperation and enthusiasm.

The commission is to create a similar research site in Lancaster County, which was selected because of a different soil type and structure. This research is being done in an attempt to broaden the understanding of what actually works within the basin to create a system of water use and treatment that ensures an adequate safe and clean water supply for all.

This year also saw a proposal by the SRBC to institute new rules on using water in the basin. It had proposed water-consumption fees to be paid by agricultural entities using large amounts of water.

As initially proposed, it was rejected by the commission board in September, following an outcry of opposition from the agricultural community during public hearings.

The staff of the SRBC was directed to rethink the situation as it affects agricultural uses and the benefits of agricultural land to the groundwater recharge, and attempt to design regulations which would be based on an "approval by rule" permitting program.

Under this type of program, special standards would be set that, if complied with, would ensure an automatic permit.

However, except for the the consumptive use regulations, other regulations proposed by the SRBC are expected to be forwarded toward approval in 1995.

While uncertain when new regulations for consumptive uses will be offered for review, efforts have been ongoing between SRBC staff and an agricultural advisory committee.

The next meeting of the SRBC is set for 9 a.m., Jan. 12 at the Radisson-Penn Harris in Camp Hill.

Nutrient Management

Other environmental issues affecting agriculture continue to be addressed by agricultural and environmental leaders.

Within the state, efforts have been strong in the formation of regulations to implement the Nutrient Management Act.

Those developing Nutrient management regulations got through the first year in with much accomplished.

Set on the edge of completion of a number of regulations, the 15-member Nutrient Management Advisory Board has been acting to complete them, even though the change in politics may change them.

The campaign promises from governor-elect Tom Ridge to recreate some government agencies starting with DER, has put a temporary uncertainty about timing of finished nutrient management regulations.

It also makes it uncertain whether bureaus or specific agents now considered as integral to the program will continue to be available after the suggested restructuring of government.

However, some retro-fitting of language to regulations could be done without interfering with the integrity of the program.

Open Spaces

Also on the environmental front, farmland preservation efforts continue and were bolstered with recent legislation as some farmland owners have sought to sell development rights to governments in order to ensure that valuable farmland is preserved.

The efforts are also supported by those seeking to ensure that some open spaces can continue to remain, though many are gone.

Residential developments and shopping malls continued to overtake the landscape this year, making more and more of the state's bread basket resemble the densely populated residential communities closer to the New York/New Jersey/Philadelphia megalopolis.

Upper Maryland and western Maryland rural areas also continued to succumb to a growing population and urban outgrowth, as transportation costs and initial local tax rates remain much lower than where these urbanites are employed, thus making long-distance commuting beneficial for those with higher-paying, inner-city jobs.

A recent news report estimated that 10 million people have immigrated to the United States between 1980 and 1990.

ATTENTION TOBACCO FARMERS

We Couldn't Do It Without You!

We'd like to thank all of the farmers who brought their tobacco to auction during the recent tobacco harvest season. We couldn't market tobacco through auction without the farmer. This truly is a local team effort. Your part is vital and appreciated. Here's wishing you a Happy New Year!

EXTRA

Granulated Starter Fertilizer

"THERE'S MORE TO IT THAN JUST NPK"

For over 47 years, farmers throughout the Mid-Atlantic Area from New York to Virginia have produced millions of dollars of crops using Lebanon Extra fertilizer.

Lebanon Extra is an ammoniated, homogenous, granular NPK fertilizer. With the increased emphasis on using less and precise applications of plant food, Lebanon Extra provides the nutrient sources that you can depend on, and not just NPK but also secondary and six micro-nutrients. The nutrient integrity of Lebanon Extra is superior to bulk blend fertilizer products. When using row applications or banding accurate amounts of plant food it can be important to use a safe, quality, uniform grade product. If you are using a blend with MAP compare the value of Lebanon Extra.

Farm Link, PASA Set Beginning Farmer Workshop

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — In an effort to promote and sustain family farming in Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Farm Link program and the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA) are jointly sponsoring a beginning farmer workshop here at the Nittany Lion Inn on Feb. 2.

According to Farm Link Coordinator Marion Bowlan, "The number of farms in Pennsylvania has declined by 55 percent since 1960. Half of our farmers have to work off the farm to make ends meet and over 65 percent of our farms gross less than $40,000 annually."

Bowlan said these adverse economic conditions have caused people to leave and also discouraged people from entering the farm sector.

Bowlan said the future of Pennsylvania agriculture depends on young people being able to enter farming. Because it is a capital-intensive business, many young people do not have the economic resources needed to start up a farm. At the same time, many older farmers are finding it difficult to phase out of farming and maintain adequate resources for retirement.

Pennsylvania Farm Link brings together experienced farmers nearing retirement, or other interested landholders, with beginning farmers looking to operate their own farm. Farm Link is a component of the Center for Rural Pennsylvania, a legislative agency of the Pennsylvania General Assembly, that works to promote and sustain the vitality of Pennsylvania's rural and small communities through grants, research, policy development, and technical assistance.

According to PASA Executive Director Tim Bowser, beginning farmers need to find ways to lower the high costs of entering farming. "New sustainable, less capital-intensive methods such as rotational grazing, reducing dependence on purchased chemicals and fertilizers, and diversifying farm production offer hope to beginning farmers who need to squeeze more out of tight profit margins," he said. "At the same time, sustainable farming practices are protecting our resources now and for future generations."

A member-based organization working to develop, support, and promote food systems that are environmentally sound, economically viable, and community based, PASA offers ideas and techniques on how beginning farmers can decrease their off-farm purchases and put more money in their pockets.

The workshop will address farm transfer issues, estate planning, business planning, farm loan resources, alternative enterprises, buying equipment, grazing strategies, marketing ideas, startup strategies, and goal setting. Participating agencies and individuals include Pennsylvania Farm Link, PASA, Penn State Cooperative Extension, York Farm Credit, Centre County Rural Economic Community Development (formerly Farmers Home Administration), and a panel of farmers.

There is a fee to cover lunch, breaks, and administrative costs. Please contact the PASA office at (814) 349-9856 or Pennsylvania Farm Link at (800) 9PA-FARM to obtain registration information.

School For Ag Sciences Celebrates Anniversary

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — College graduates with expertise in agricultural sciences will enjoy a strong employment market through the 1990s, according to a recent USDA report. Positions in marketing, merchandising and technical areas will be difficult to fill, and scientists, engineers and related specialists will be in great demand.

"There are tremendous opportunities in the agricultural sciences for young people today," said Dr. Marianne Houser, a Penn State assistant professor who directs the Pennsylvania Governor's School for the Agricultural Sciences. This year the school is celebrating its 10th anniversary.

Penn State is trying to catch the best and the brightest high school students in the state, to teach them about career opportunities in agriculture. This summer, from July 2 to August 5, the 64 high school juniors and seniors enrolled in Governor's School will spend their vacations on Penn State's University Park Campus studying agricultural economics and business, plant and animal science, land use, remote sensing and computers.

Students from both urban and rural areas will be selected for their strong academic credentials and interest in science and technology. Each student will be awarded a full scholarship covering tuition, classroom materials, student activities and room and board in the university's residence halls.

"Governor's School is a once in a lifetime experience," said Houser. "Students are exposed to a wide variety of fields — agricultural economics and business, animal science, engineering systems, plant science, international agriculture, and managing natural resources and the environment. They learn about methods and techniques of agricultural research, leadership development and career planning."

Participants also may choose to study entomology, agricultural engineering, food science, remote sensing, and geographic information systems. They will work individually with faculty members on independent study projects.

Penn State's extensive teaching and research facilities provide the students with access to classrooms, computers, libraries, and laboratories. Governor's School assistants supervise the students and take part in classes, special events, and field trips.

Governor's School scholars also have the opportunity to meet and interview professionals about career opportunities in industries such as food processing and agricultural communications.

Field trips and activities are planned, including visits to Longwood Botanical Gardens, Hershey Foods, the New Bolton Center at the University of Pennsylvania, the Atlantic Breeders Cooperative and Shaver's Creek Environmental Center.

The Governor's School for the Agricultural Sciences is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Education, the state's intermediate units, and Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. Pennsylvania's Governor's Schools also are offered in the arts, sciences, education, health care, and international studies.

Applications are available in high school guidance centers. Those who are interested in applying should act now. Deadlines for application are in early February. Questions about the Governor's School for the Agricultural Sciences can be directed to Marianne Houser or Nancy Walker at (814) 865-7521.

N.Y. Farm Bureau Elects President

CALLICOON, N.Y. — John Lincoln, an Ontario County dairy farmer, was elected president of the 25,000-member New York Farm Bureau, at the organization's state convention at the Villa Roma Resort Hotel.

Lincoln is the first Western New York farmer to head the state's leading farm and rural advocacy group in over a quarter of a century. Lincoln succeeds the retiring Charles Wille, an Orange County dairy farmer who was first elected state president in December 1985.

Lincoln has been vice president of the New York Farm Bureau since December 1986. Prior to being elected vice president, he served for six years on the New York Farm Bureau board of directors.

On his 350-acre farm in Holcomb, he milks 100 cows. A graduate of Cornell University, Lincoln represents New York Farm Bureau on the Council of Agricultural Organizations, the Farm Family Insurance Companies board of directors, and the Department of Environmental Conservation's Agricultural Advisory Committee. He has also served as chairman of New York Farm Bureau's Safety Group #486, the State Resolutions Committee, and the Audit Committee.

and the 'jokesy' things just don't do that. When I started serious collecting in the early 1980's I could find more true type cows in the antique shops than I do now. Cow figures have become popular since I started collecting, but they are mostly those cute figures that I don't want."

Bohn was born into a dairy farm family in Frederick County, Maryland, and became acquainted with Holsteins and a few other kinds mixed in. He later graduated from Bridgewater College in Virginia and got away from the farm. But those cows were still in his blood.

"At home I always liked the cows that were different," Bohn said. "And I still do. I still have some cardboard cut-out cows my grandfather gave me as a boy, but when my father passed away, I decided to buy a model cow as a memorial to him. And from then on it was another, and another, and another."

Bohn has many elite figurines and models in his collection. For example, he has personal contact with John Harper, the famous sculptor of limited edition model cows who lives on the Isle of Man located between England and Ireland. One of the more appreciated pieces in the collection is Harper's sculptured model of the official true-type Jersey cow for the Isle of Man. Other exclusive names in the collection include: Royal Dalton, Andrea, and Beswick. Some of his exquisite pieces are pricey, but he limits his buys to a maximum of $200 per cow. On the other hand, many of his cows are quite inexpensive. Some pieces are of rare breeds known only in remote parts of the world. The exhibit includes 40 to 45 different breeds of cows.

If you want to start a collection, Bohn has some advice. "Buy what you like, and don't worry if it's a good investment," he said. "If you buy as an investment, it's probably not the best investment anyway. And then you have to sell them. I don't want to sell my cows because I like to look at them."

What about all these animals sitting around the house?

"Actually my wife Joyce finds pieces she thinks I should add to my collection," Bohn said. "In fact, one of the wall display racks that looks like a barn with a silo was her find at the Brethren relief sale. It was made for Windross trucks, but she thought it should be filled with cows. So she bought it for me. For collectors like me, it helps to have an understanding wife."

What about his peers in the urban business world? What do they think about his secret love of cows?

"For a while when I first started collecting cows, I was embarrassed," Bohn said. "But then I decided that I'm entitled to my eccentricity as well as anyone else. So it's no secret any more."

From this reporter's viewpoint, for those of us who have grown up on the farm, it's not eccentricity at all. It's just the way we are made.

Small cow figurines have completely occupied this barn/silo display unit purchased at the Brethren Relief Sale and originally made for Windross trucks.

Limousin Posts Record Month

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Despite less than bullish market conditions throughout most segments of the beef industry, the Limousin breed continues to set new marks.

The North American Limousin Foundation (NALF) posted the most registrations in its history for a single month in November with 10,208 head.

"Given the pressures that exist in the market place, it's exciting to see this level of commitment from Limousin breeders," said Dr. John Edwards, NALF executive vice-president.

He said, "As the breed has grown, so has the dedication to document the genetics and performance of the cattle. Obviously that has a lot to do with the fact that commercial cattlemen are looking for that kind of documentation in making selection decisions."

Year-end numbers for the breed attest to that fact. During the last fiscal year, NALF transfers of cattle grew at a record pace for the seventh consecutive year. Based on annual registrations, Limousin is the second largest beef breed in the United States.

According to Edwards, "The breed has grown at a phenomenal rate during a period of seedstock consolidation. It has grown based on the breed's inherent advantages in calving ease and carcass merit compared to other widely used Continental breeds."

"With recent reports from the Meat Animal Research Center documenting the fact that Limousin has the greatest feed efficiency and retail yield of any widely-used breed, and the evolution of the industry toward value-based marketing where muscle and retail yield look to have added advantage, Limousin has a tremendous opportunity to gain even more wide-spread acceptance."

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — The Franklin County 4-H Baby Beef Club held its Buyers Award Banquet in November at Kauffman Community Center.

The highlight of the evening was to recognize the buyers who purchased steers at the sale. It was also attended by 4-H members, parents, and guests.

Bill Reagan, county agent, introduced the buyers and shared appreciation for their support. Duane Hawbaker, club leader, and Steve Walk, project leader, passed out awards that the members earned at the roundup. Two brothers received the grand champion and reserve champion banner and plaque. The are Jordon Conner who received the grand champion award and Justin Conner who received the reserve champion award, they are the sons of Phoebe and Jeff Conner of Loudon Road, St. Thomas. Justin Conner also received the champion fitter award and Crystal Meyers received the champion shower award. Best project book was awarded to Justin Conner. The daily weight gain award went to Jimmy Clapsaddle.

Jay Meyers, from Meyers Implement Company, spoke to the audience about his life as a high school graduate up until his present day as a businessman. He talked about his relationship with his customers and told us that the key to being prosperous in business is to keep your customer happy, more than trying to make that extra dollar.

MMI Has Strong Financial Report

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — A strong financial report for fiscal year 1994 and an announcement of "unification discussions" between Milk Marketing Inc. (MMI) and Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative Association highlighted talks of a changing dairy industry at MMI's 1994 Annual Delegate meeting held recently in Columbus, Ohio.

Merle Koppenhafer, chief financial officer, reported that MMI's financial results for fiscal year ending June 30, 1994 showed a revenue of $725 million and earnings of $3.7 million. Both were increases over the 1993 fiscal year.

In the first six months of the fiscal year (beginning July 1, 1994), MMI returned to its 5,600 members nearly $7 million — $1.9 million in patronage earnings and $5.2 million in redeemed equity. Koppenhafer noted that those were monies over and above members' regular milk checks.

In separate addresses to MMI's 250 delegates, Herman Brubaker, chair and president, and Don Schriver, chief executive officer, said the unification talks with Eastern Milk Producers are a direct result of the changes taking place in the political and market arenas.

Those changes revolve around two key factors: a legislative agenda that is not responsive to dairy farmers, milk price supports or the federal order system; and a marketplace driven by inconsistencies in where milk is produced and used, according to an MMI news release.

"We dairy farmers have reached a critical point in our professional lives where we must make some very tough decisions," commented Brubaker. "We are at that exact moment in time that will define how our sons, our daughters and our grandchildren will dairy farm within this region, within this part of the globe. Are we, as dairy farmers, going to continue fighting our neighbors regionally and nationally for markets? It's time to decide."

Brubaker said MMI's conversations with Eastern Milk Producers — a 3,200 member dairy cooperative based in Syracuse, N.Y. — are driven by those new market realities.

"National milk production continues to escalate, while our region's production continues to hold the line," cited Brubaker.

"This past October, total U.S. milk production rose a whopping 3.4 percent over October of 1993. MMI's market region barely held the line. For the first nine months of this year, our area's milk production declined two percent."

Currently Texas, Washington, California and Idaho hold places in the top 10 dairy producing states, with New Mexico not far behind. To compound the issue, he said, this milk is produced in an area of little market availability so it's traveling across state lines into other region's markets and eroding the premium base of local farm families. And the trend is happening all across the country.

Schriver said that recent actions with Eastern Milk Producers illustrate MMI's commitment to seek out opportunities that achieve the number one mission — to provide the best markets and services for its members and to be the best supplier to customers.

"We're not in the dairy business, we're in business — it just happens to be dairy," said Schriver.

er. Accepting that kind of business philosophy, said Schriver, is absolutely central to the survival of producers and their cooperative organizations.

Even though talks are at a preliminary stage, Schriver said foreseeable advantages of a unification would be to enhance business strength, market position and farmer unity.

Both organizations are financially well-positioned. Last year, MMI marketed 4.75 billion pounds of milk and generated revenues of more than $725 million; Eastern Milk Producers marketed nearly 2 billion pounds of milk with $276 million in revenues.

Together, the two dairy farmer-owned cooperatives would be the third largest dairy cooperative in the nation representing nearly 9,000 members in eleven states and marketing a total of 6.7 billion pounds of milk annually.

Milk Marketing Inc. is the nation's 7th largest dairy cooperative and is the 73rd largest U.S. food company. Headquartered in Strongsville, Ohio, MMI is owned by 5,600 dairy farm families in Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, New York and West Virginia.

Farmland Preservation Programs Approved

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The state Agricultural Land Preservation Board has approved county farmland preservation programs for Clinton, Lawrence, Mifflin, and Washington counties, enabling them to receive state funding to permanently preserve farmland.

"We welcome these new counties into the state farmland protection program," said state Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff, who chairs the board. "Thirty-seven of the state's 67 counties now have approved programs to help preserve Pennsylvania's agriculture traditions."

Under the Farmland Protection Program, the state and counties purchase development rights from landowners to guarantee that farms will remain as agricultural land. Easement purchases are approved by the state board.

The State Agricultural Land Preservation Board also approved easement purchases for 17 farms in 11 counties.

The board has approved easement purchases on 60,700 acres of Pennsylvania farmland since it was created in 1988.

In a special ceremony board member and former Chester County state Rep. Sam Morris presented Secretary Wolff with a plaque from the board recognizing Wolff's vision and dedication in pioneering Pennsylvanians farmland preservation program.

Under Wolff's leadership, the Bureau of Farmland Protection was established within the Department Of Agriculture and grew to second in the nation in the number of acres under protected easements within five years.

The plaque also said Wolff's efforts demonstrate his commitment to preserving Pennsylvania's agricultural resources and a way of life.

caster County two children went into a partially-filled silo to throw down haylage that had been put in the day before, and even though the blower had been run for twenty minutes with the distributor snout in the down position, both died from the same gasses that nearly killed Fred Shankle. Other deaths and injuries have occurred over the years, too.

We must become better educated on gasses so that we KNOW WHAT TO DO TO PREVENT such accidents.

First, the gas was NOT methane gas as the captions under the pictures said. Methane gas is lighter than air and escapes out the top of non-oxygen-limiting silos. Danger from methane gas exists in closed-top manure pits with openings into an enclosed area. It is NEVER a danger with open silos.

The gases that Fred Shankle nearly succumbed to on October 19, and the two boys here in Lancaster, were the non-flammable gasses that are HEAVIER than air! In Fred's case, if he had taken one step UP the silo chute instead of going DOWN, he could have avoided the tragedy, initially, unless the wind was blowing air up the silo chute, which it was not doing that day. However, a better choice would have been to have opened the 15th door immediately after filling the previous day to allow the gasses to escape instead of collecting in the partially-filled silo. (Always put a tag on the blower and tractor to prevent someone from filling without looking in the silo! More than once farmers have restarted the filling without looking in and had some expensive and time-consuming repairs as a result!) Nitrogenous gasses are usually yellowish in color, and in heavier concentrations, brownish. But fatal levels could exist with no smell or visible color at all. Carbon monoxide is also a product of fermentation and is colorless, and fatal!

So far I have never seen a reasonably-sized compressed air tank that could be taken into a silo for the few minutes that it may be necessary to go in each day during filling, so we need to educate safety equipment specialists to provide them!

For many years full face mask apparatus have been available for the application of anhydrous ammonia on corn silage, and for mid-winter opening of capped silos where mold spores can be as extremely hazardous as gasses at filling time! It would not be very difficult for manufacturers to design a hose and tank for farm use. I have never yet heard a reasonable excuse for not having them available, at a reasonable price!

Each incident like the Shankle story brings us farmers closer to having regulations forced upon us, and we must respond by getting better education and by pushing for the right equipment to be made to protect our health and safety! It would also be very much a tragedy if we were not taught about biological hazards in schools and colleges and by extension agents and farm safety specialists, so let's help them do their job by encouraging them and by joining groups like FARM SAFETY 4 JUST KIDS, related to the national SAFE KIDS campaign. County groups are springing up across Pennsylvania, and they need our help to prevent unreasonable regulations from being forced upon us by well-meaning but non-farm regulators! JOIN UP!

Chamber Committee Works To Unify Ag's Voice

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
REFTON (Lancaster Co.) —
Reassessment. Farm finances.
Animal welfare. Nutrient management.

Those are the issues that farmers face every day in the '90s. Many are confused about the issues. What can they do?

Newly elected Lancaster Chamber of Commerce board member Ken Meck, a diversified livestock farmer in Refton, knows how important representation is to achieving results. Meck has been working for the past several years to "unify" the voice of agriculture in Lancaster County so farm organization leaders can "get together to discuss possible solutions rather than sending out dissenting messages," he said during a recent interview at his farm.

Meck, who maintains a 50,000-bird pullet house and finishes out 200 head of beef cattle and 1,200 head of hogs each year at his farm, said the agriculture committee at the chamber is planning an array of programs to help farmers understand the issues and work to solve them.

The chamber is working closely with the Lancaster County Farm Bureau to help promote a series of meetings in various county locations scheduled for January and February on the countywide reassessment, set to begin in July.

"One of the things we want to encourage is farmer participation in the reassessment meetings," said Meck. Many farmers will be affected in a big way with reassessment in the county and need to know what's involved. "We want to get in touch with these farmers so that they can understand what's coming."

Also, the chamber has worked to expand the annual agrifinance seminar, scheduled Jan. 26 at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster. The first seminar held last year, which provided "very positive feedback," said Meck, was limited to 40 farmers. This year, the seminar is limited to 50 farmers, who may be sponsored by their ag lender. Those interested should contact Roger Rohrer at 291-3707.

At the seminar, the topic is "Managing Success As a Family Farm," featuring Dr. Donald J. Jonovic, farm management expert. Founder of Cleveland's Family Business Management Services and president of Jamieson Press, Jonovic has authored six books about family business and business management.

Also featured at the seminar will be Dr. David Kohl, professor of ag economics at Virginia Polytechnic Institute. He will be speaking about managing farm finances.

Meck, who grows 250 acres of crops for all three aspects of his business, has been recently elected to a three-year term at the chamber. Meck said the chamber's ag committee is looking for more diverse representation of farming in the county, including dairy, beef, poultry, hogs, and sheep. They have recently announced a position is open for somebody in production agriculture, specifically vegetable and fruit growers in the county.

In recent years, the chamber has also provided information at the annual Ag Expo, held in Lancaster Square, and has served as a sponsor at the annual Kreider's Farm Open House in the summer.

Meck indicated that the chamber's work extends into educating farmers about the concerns that a lot of producers face in the county, state, and nationwide. One concern on the front burner is animal welfare.

The ag committee is working, according to Meck, to "see that the message gets out that farmers are concerned about the welfare of their animals and their livestock," he said. "If they aren't, economically, they aren't going to survive."

Another major concern is the prices for livestock, particularly hogs and beef. One concern is the lack of long-term commitment some processors are showing to the smaller farmer.

"I think the processor has to be a little more aggressive in trying to establish a rapport with not just the large operators, but also the small operators," he said. "I think at this time that processors are probably looking at the large complexes and making agreements with them and they really don't have too much set up for the small producer. They certainly aren't giving (the small producer) much economic stability."

Also, nutrient management, in terms of controlling feedlot runoff, has to be a concern for producers.

Meck praised the small producers for the "tradition" that is Lancaster County agriculture, but encouraged more representation in helping the chamber achieve one of its goals: communicate farming to nonfarming members of the community, and the concerns farmers face.

Newly elected Lancaster Chamber of Commerce board member Ken Meck, a diversified livestock farmer in Refton, knows how important representation is to achieving results. Meck has been working for the past several years to "unify" the voice of agriculture in Lancaster County so farm organization leaders can "get together to discuss possible solutions rather than sending out dissenting messages," he said during a recent interview at his farm.

"Personally, I think it's good to have farmers share their viewpoints with those that work with the farmers and the nonfarm public, because of the impact that agriculture has on their lives."

"As development occurs, we need to plan the agricultural outcome for our children and grandchildren. It takes leadership. When the bulldozers arrive, it's too late.

"There is hope," Cole said. "There are farms outside urban areas that are surviving. It takes place because of leadership and planning and the role of importance of agriculture. It takes community and local government support to make it work."

Cole said one way farmers are making it is through direct marketing. "There are only two ways to make a profit—to lower the cost of production or raise the price of the product. More farms are going to increase the price of their product through direct marketing." Farmers must also fight to retain that right to direct market.

Cole also said the size of farming and the concentration of farming in the U.S. is changing.

"By 1995, 70 percent of our chicken will be produced by five farms. By 1995, 60 percent of the hogs will be processed by four to five companies.

"There are shifts in agriculture towards climate and to where water is. The dairy cows are leaving California and moving to Idaho. Because of irrigation in Idaho, potato and fruit growers experience few foliage diseases. And there's no manure management in Wyoming."

Cole attends seven or eight extension annual meetings each year and said it restores his faith in humanity because he sees a group of people who give of themselves for the betterment of humanity.

Speaking to more than 70 friends of and leaders in extension, Dr. Herbert Cole of Penn State talks about sustaining agriculture for the future through leadership.

Earlier in the evening during the business meeting, John Czerniakowski welcomed guests, Nancy Massa motioned for acceptance of the 1993 minutes, and Helen Kirk gave the treasurer's report.

County Extension Director Dave Filson distributed the annual report and highlighted its purpose and contents. Of extension, the volunteers, and leaders in general, Filson concluded that "a lot of people's lives have been changed because of our efforts."

Regional Director Dr. Harold

Elected for leadership on the Mifflin County Extension Committee are, from left, Joyce Uhland, treasurer; J. Loren Yoder, vice president; and Nancy Massa, secretary.

Ott thanked attending legislators and commissioners for their financial support.

J. Robert Stauffer conducted the election of directors and officers. Elected to serve on the board for five year terms were Beth Knepp, Dr. Christopher Custer, J. Lester Yoder, and Terry Clemens.

The 1995 officers will be President Alan Laughlin, Vice President J. Loren Yoder, Secretary Nancy Massa, and Treasurer Joyce Uhland.

Portrait Of Dean Unveiled At University

NEWARK, Del. — A portrait of Dr. Donald F. Crossan, former dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences, was unveiled Nov. 19 at the University of Delaware.

The portrait, which was painted by local artist Russell Finley, hangs in the lobby of Townsend Hall next to the portrait of former dean George Worriow.

The unveiling ceremony to honor Crossan's lifelong career at the college was held during the Agricultural Alumni Association's annual tailgate party. More than 100 people were in attendance at the ceremony.

"I like the idea that my portrait is hanging next to George Worriow's," Crossan said. George hired me, he was my mentor and he had a great influence on my career as dean. He was dedicated to service for the farm sector. George set the stage and I followed in his footsteps."

Dr. John C. Nye, current dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences, said that the portrait will serve as a reminder of how much Crossan achieved at the college — as a teacher, as an administrator, and as an advocate for agriculture in Delaware.

Crossan was dean from 1977 to 1991. Under his leadership, the college's classroom and laboratory space more than doubled with the completion of Worriow Hall and the Fischer Greenhouse Laboratory. He was instrumental in substantially increasing total student enrollment as well as the percentage of women on the faculty.

United States Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, the United States population increased by 2.6 million last year, with one third of that gain coming from immigrants from other nations.

From July 1993 to July 1994, the Mid Atlantic region saw and overall increase of about 80,000 people, based on the balance of 560,000 births, 373,000 deaths, 256,000 people leaving, and 149,000 people immigrating from other nations.

Pressure from immigrants, including refugees (legal and illegal) from around the world, has created a great cause of concern for historic residents and communities as they watch their schools become crowded, living conditions worsen, established community services such as courts, prisons and police overwhelmed, and no compatible increase in funds to pay for the increased needs.

California made news this year in an attempt to ban illegal immigrants from receiving government benefits, such as free schooling and health care, services considered by many to be a privilege reserved for tax-paying citizens.

The issue can be expected to be long-lasting and controversial throughout, as communities change in makeup and intensity.

Dairy Changes

In the dairy industry, farm numbers and cattle numbers in the state continue a slow decline, while milk production was relatively flat.

A new form of a disease called bovine virus diarrhea (BVD) was discovered in some herds across the state, mostly in the northwestern region. The new form apparently was controlled only by complete vaccinations, and officials quickly recommended new rules for health standards for showing cattle at county fairs and breed shows.

While dairy shows continued to be held, under caution, and many high quality animals were exhibited, overall numbers were down, somewhat significantly for many shows.

Other rules changes pending in the dairy industry concern the testing of milk by the National Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

The gist of the rules changes is to maintain a high quality testing program, but to shift responsibility for verification of how the record data was achieved to the end user of the information supplied through the testing and records processing service.

Specifics are still being worked out, but should be announced late winter.

At the same time, uncertainty still describes the situation among individual DHIA testing centers and records processing centers. Mergers have continued to occur throughout the nation, and experiments between organizations have been tried in an attempt to determine the most affordable, efficient and reliable service to the dairy cattle and goat producer.

Throughout the industry, mergers have occurred as changing commodity prices and diminished memberships have pressured certain groups to combine.

Other groups have merged to strengthen market positioning.

One such major merger was between milk promotion efforts, with the creation of the Dairy Marketing Inc., a group which oversees the expenditures of funds from both the still-existing National Dairy Promotion and Research Board (NDB) and the United Dairy Industry Association.

The directors of the DMI are drawn from members of both the NDB and UDIA boards.

For Pennsylvania's Dairy Promotion Program, it's own affiliation with the Mid-East promotion group makes it a member of the DMI and entitles it to access to marketing information that individually, it would not be able to afford.

While the legality of the formation of that group had been questioned by some Western and Mid Western concerns, it has been ruled to be operating within legal restrictions.

New Alliances

Other new alliances also formed.

Hershey Foods Corp., in Hershey, for the first time in its history, has contracted to have its fluid milk supplied by a single entity — Atlantic Dairy Cooperative.

The termination of its individual business relationships with more than 700 independent dairymen came apparently coincidentally with an internal company administrative restructuring.

The chocolate company should be able to save on costs for maintaining staff to work with the individual producers, and the change should also reduce the need for Hershey to broker excess milk to other buyers.

Internationally

With the passage of the GATT — the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade — international rules of trade have changed.

While few have had opportunity to read the contents of the thick document, it was approved by the Democratically lead Congress, as a last act before the new Republican-powered General Assembly begins its session.

The outlook for certain agricultural operations should be good, because of an expected increase in exporting goods. However, small family farmers are expected to be hurt, and lawmakers said so, even immediately after approving the document.

How well the document's provisions are followed by participating nations remains to be seen, but many barriers to selling American products overseas are supposed to have been reduced, if not eliminated.

Bay Office Awards Grants

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Chesapeake Bay Education Office announced today the award of 26 grants for improving water quality within the Chesapeake Bay Drainage in Pennsylvania.

The 1994-1995 Mini-Projects grants provide up to $750 to local environmental, civic, and community organizations within the Susquehanna and Potomac River watersheds in the state.

The two watersheds contribute 52 percent of the fresh-water reaching the Chesapeake. Daily activities such as fertilizing a lawn can impact the quality of water that enters local streams and eventually the Chesapeake Bay.

Each year, the Pennsylvania Chesapeake Bay Education Office supports citizen involvement in cleanup activities of the Chesapeake Bay by providing funds for projects designed to improve water quality in their communities.

Eligible projects emphasize how Pennsylvanians can improve local water quality to protect local resources and the Chesapeake Bay. The objectives of the Mini-Projects are to:

- Stimulate an awareness and interest in Pennsylvania's non-point source water pollution problems and solutions. (Nonpoint source pollution comes from the general drainage of the land and cannot be traced to a specific source.)

- Publicize and/or demonstrate the value of soil and nutrient saving practices in agriculture.

- Encourage farmers, homeowners, local officials and others to implement actions which can help reduce nonpoint source pollution, improve water quality, and help protect the Chesapeake Bay.

For more information on any of these projects, contact the Pennsylvania Chesapeake Bay Education Office, 225 Pine St., Harrisburg, PA 17101, (717) 236-1006.

Brubaker Star Farmer, Speaker Of N.C. House

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff
MT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — Every year youth are asked to tell what career or long-term goals they envision for themselves, especially youth who receive honors, such as the FFA Keystone farmer degree.

Almost exactly 32 years ago, a 17-year-old senior at Donegal High School was honored for receiving an FFA keystone farmer degree, the regional star farmer award, and the state star farmer award.

At that time, he wanted to be involved in genetics or become a field man for the Holstein Association, and own a farm.

In a few weeks, the now 49-year-old man who has since relocated to North Carolina, is to be sworn into office as speaker of the House in the Tarheel General Assembly.

Harold Brubaker, son of Paul N. and Verna Brubaker, of Mt. Joy, was back in Lancaster County over the Christmas holiday to visit with his parents and old friends.

He lives in Asheboro, N.C. with his wife Gerladine, a school nurse, and children Jonathan, 14, and Justin 10. Brubaker is president of a real estate appraisal and consulting firm and has served in the North Carolina legislature as a representative since 1977.

He also owns a 30-acre farm and raises Belgian Blue beef cattle — a breed that produces extraordinary amounts of lean meat.

On Wednesday, at his parents' 75-acre beef farm, Brubaker talked about his outlook as a young adult involved in FFA, the enjoyment of being involved in the Witness Oak FFA Chapter, and the importance of the FFA experience in helping him have the confidence and background to be able to function well in meeting the demands of a variety of jobs.

Brubaker earned numerous agricultural awards while in high school.

By age 16, he had already won the title as top dairy cattle judge in the state in 1962 and competed at nationals; he also was a star chapter dairyman and star chapter poultry farmer; he won a state essay contest run by the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives; he was the youngest ever to win the Holstein Boy of the Year award.

In FFA, he also served as state secretary and as a national vice president for the North Atlantic region, and toured the country speaking to different groups.

He said in one year he traveled 60,000 miles, and at one point was in San Francisco one day and in Bangor, Maine, the next.

He said that traveling around and meeting people was something he enjoyed, and it helped get him interested in politics. He said meeting Oregon's former Sen. Wayne Morris, who ran for several terms as a Democrat, and then as a Republican helped him also.

According to Harold, he asked the senator if he thought a farmboy could become a senator, and that Morris answered, "What do you think I am? I'm a sheep farmer."

But one can be fairly certain that Brubaker was not about to accept an answer that would have placed limits on what a farmboy can do.

When at 16, interviewed by a Lancaster newspaper after receiving an award from the newspaper, Brubaker was quoted as saying, "The whole agricultural field has vast possibilities. There is a great future in farming and in the not-too-distant future, the farmer is going to be regarded in the same manner as professional people such as doctors and lawyers are today."

"However, education of the farmer is the greatest need. Especially in this mechanized era when so much depends on know-how to reap the top benefits from acreage."

According to the article, he had owned 16 registered Holsteins and three Brown Swiss, and was planning to rent a 67-acre farm and pay rent on it by raising tobacco in order to compete for the top FFA award. He was quoted as saying, "The larger my farming program, the more chance I have of winning."

His plans were to possibly go into partnership with his father on the family farm, and perhaps own a farm of his own some day, but to have it managed by someone else, while he pursued a career related to agriculture, in genetics or as a field man for the state Holstein Association.

The same year that Brubaker was named state star farmer, Donald Norman, now owner of a registered Jersey herd at Breezalee Farms in Liberty, also earned his Keystone Farmer Degree.

This week, Norman said he remembers Brubaker.

Norman said he first met Brubaker at a leadership conference offered by the Pennsylvania Association of Cooperatives. According to Donald, Brubaker entertained the group with his portrayal of Professor Schnitzel — a then-popular fictional character whose Brubaker is about to be named speaker of the house for the North Carolina House of Representatives. He credits FFA and goal setting for his successes.

Open House Dairy Barn Draws Crowd

No place to park.

STRASBURG (Lancaster Co.) — The new state-of-the-art dairy facilities at the Glenn and Mildred Good family farm are ready to house 150 cows in a modern comfort stall barn with milking parlor.

But on Thursday, there were at least four times the number of people as cows in these facilities.

The event was the open house, or better called the open barn sponsored by the commercial businesses responsible for the erection of the buildings and silos and installation of the dairy equipment.

Starting at 10 a.m., a steady stream of cars filled into the farmstead located off Lime Valley Road, and for the noon lunch the place was packed.

Crowd gathered in the freestall barn for lunch.

humor routine was based on aspects of language and communication by the Pennsylvania-Dutch.

At his parents' home, Brubaker pointed to an older console record player and said that was where he played his album of the professor until he could also perform the humor.

"I can't sing or play an instrument," Brubaker said, "and I was in this talent contest, so I had to do something."

But Brubaker said the main things that helped him achieve successes has been goal setting and planning. "If you don't set goals, you can't achieve goals," he said.

According to both Brubaker and Norman, FFA prepared them both for being involved with organizational activities that affect their life. It gave them a background and confidence to speak in front of others that few educational programs today can offer.

Brubaker said especially important for him was learning parliamentary procedure and public speaking through FFA and vocational agricultural.

He said that when he was in FFA, "I remember thinking, 'Why do we need this, if we're going to be farming?'" But then an advisor told him that if he didn't learn how to speak in front of a group of people and develop confidence, people would laugh at him if he tried. Brubaker said he decided to learn.

But while fear of ridicule has motivated many for self-improvement, the real reason to learn the basics of democratic procedure is so the individual can remain an individual.

"You never know when you're going to have to reach back and use those skills," he said. "They are the greatest skills you can have, along with writing."

"All that is why I think it is important to continue (FFA programs) in high school. And if not in high school, 4-H is a place to learn it, but it's so important."

"It's like learning to swim — you never know when your going to need the skill," Brubaker said.

His political career really started, he said, after graduating from Penn State with a degree in agricultural economics. He took a job in North Carolina teaching agricultural business, and within six months a friend got him involved in the Young Republican organization there. Six months later, he was chairman of the committee.

Two years later, he was assistant secretary of the state Republican party of North Carolina, and after turning down several invitations to run for certain offices, he decided to accept a third invitation to run for the House. He said he figured it was time to say, "Yes."

While all this was going on, he finished a master's degree in economics from NCU and also became involved in real estate appraisals.

He said that a class in agricultural land appraisal in school and when he was teaching at the community college in Randolph County, N.C., where he lives, he saw that no one was doing a good, in-depth analysis of property values. He became the first in the county and now employs more than a half-dozen people in that business.

About that same time, he helped start a 4-H dairy club in the county that still continues.

Currently his 70 Belgian Blue cattle occupy much of his free time. One of seven certified judges of the cattle in the United States, he also serves on the board of directors of the U.S. breed organization.

He has been breeding Belgian's for low birth weights and has picked up and developed a line with offspring averaging about 67 pounds. He traveled to Belgium and England and Canada to seek out the stock he currently has.

But after all these successes,

Brubaker gives credit to those who taught him and guided him, and to the programs offered, such as FFA.

Donald Norman, whose family is associated with the state Jersey Cattle Association, said he agrees.

"I'm a strong supporter of FFA. It's one of those educational systems that people don't recognize the importance of what's being done. It's one of the few places where students have an opportunity to stand up in front of adults to speak publicly in front of adults. There's so many things that FFA did right."

"I like to talk about the assembly line of education," Norman said, referring to the general public education system. "You run (children) into the room and talk at them. It's very efficient. It's the Henry Ford system of education."

"But FFA gave you the opportunity to do things with your hands, and with academics. We took the academic and vo-ag combination," Norman said. "It gives a good balance. A lot of these students today can't do anything with their hands. Just sitting and listening to a teacher doesn't mean you can do it."

As far as the successes that were achieved by Brubaker, Norman said, "I'm not surprised. The only surprise is that I expected him to be in Harrisburg (as a political representative), instead of North Carolina."

Dairy Farmer Elected Farm Bureau V.P.

CALLICOON, N.Y. — Jon Greenwood of Canton has been elected vice president of the 25,000-member New York Farm Bureau at the organization's state convention at the Villa Roma Resort Hotel.

Along with his wife, Linda, and three children, Jon owns and operates a 200-cow dairy farm with 500 acres of field crops and 100 fallow deer. A graduate of LEAD NY (the former Empire State Food and Agricultural Leadership Institute) he has been on the board of directors of the New York Farm Bureau for the last five years.

He is also on several New York Farm Bureau state committees, including the Executive Committee of the State Board of Directors, the Audit Committee, the Executive Committee of Safety Group #486 vice chairman of the Resolutions Committee, and chairman of the Dairy Advisory Committee. On the national level, he is a member of the American Farm Bureau's Dairy Advisory Committee.

He is a past president of the St. Lawrence County Farm Bureau and a past state chairman of New York Farm Bureau's State Young Farmer Committee.

Harold Brubaker stands with some Holstein-cross beef animals. The calf is a Belgian Blue/Holstein. One of the top breeders of Belgian Blue beef cattle in the United States, he has developed a low-birth weight line and his nephew has been working to use the 50/50 Holstein cross for superior beef production.

Redeemed Equity Goes To Dairy Farmers

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — Checks totaling more than $5.2 million in redeemed equity recently went to the dairy farm families of Milk Marketing Inc. (MMI), the region's largest dairy cooperative.

MMI—the 5,600 member dairy cooperative based in Strongsville, Ohio—returned a two-year cash redemption to its members totaling $5.2 million. The double redemption represents the equity investment made by MMI members to protect and enhance their markets through their Farmers Dairy Foods Inc. manufacturing facilities during fiscal years 1984 and 1985.

"MMI's equity redemption policy has been to return one year's worth of equity to members on a 10-year revolving schedule," said Don Schriver, MMI's executive vice president and chief executive officer. "However, this year MMI's producer-directed board elected to redeem, in cash, two years worth of member equity. The redemption was based on the cooperative's stability and financial results."

This December's double redemption marks the second time in the past six months that MMI members have received a cash payment over and above their monthly milk checks.

In September, MMI's dairy producer families received $1.9 million in patronage earnings. The cash issue was the equivalent of 5 cents per hundredweight based on the total pounds of milk members marketed through MMI from July 1, 1993 to June 30, 1994.

This month's $5 million redemption coupled with the $1.9 million patronage issue made in September means that MMI has returned nearly $7 million to its members in the first six months of the new fiscal year beginning with July 1, 1994.

According to Schriver, "That's an achievement belonging to the 5,600 dairy producers who belong to MMI. It's their commitment to marketing their commodities together through one business entity that makes these kinds of returns possible. It pays to work together. It pays to belong."

According to MMI's audited financial statement published this past fall, the cooperative, with 4.75 billion pounds of milk marketed and processed during fiscal year 1994, generated net revenues of $725 million and showed a net savings of $3.7 million. Both revenues and savings were up $36 million and $2.8 million, respectively, over year-earlier levels.

Milk Marketing Inc. is the nation's 7th largest dairy cooperative and is the 73rd largest U.S. food company Headquartered in Strongsville, Ohio, MMI is owned by 5,600 dairy farm families in Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, New York and West Virginia. In fiscal year 1994, MMI marketed and processed more than 4.75 billion pounds of milk and generated revenues of $725 million.

Department Chair Lauded By Soil Science Society

NEWARK, Del. — Congratulations and honors awaited Dr. Donald L. Sparks at the annual conference of the Soil Science Society of America, held in Seattle, Wash., Nov. 13-17.

Sparks was awarded the Soil Science Research Award. This award is based on demonstration of unusual creativity, excellence in reasoning ability and or technical skill, and originality and significance of research to basic soil science.

Only 15 years into his career, Sparks is one of the youngest recipients of the award. Sparks, distinguished professor of soil science and chair of the department of plant and soil sciences at the University of Delaware College of Agricultural Sciences, has pursued research in physical chemistry of soils that is highly recognized nationally and internationally. He pioneered research on the kinetics of soil chemical processes.

Using kinetic methods that he developed, Sparks also has made substantive contributions in understanding the chemistry of potassium in soils and in elucidating mechanisms of metal and organic chemical interactions with soil components using in situ spectroscopic and microscopic techniques.

Sparks credits a supportive research environment with his success.

"The supportive environment from administrators and colleagues in the college and the university has been an important part of my career at the University of Delaware," he said. "Support for my early research on kinetics of soil chemical reactions came from a UDRF grant. Continued support has come from local industry, particularly the DuPont Company, through the University of Delaware Research Partnership program. The Unidel Foundation has funded the purchase of state-of-the-art equipment that has been invaluable in helping us to execute some novel research on contaminant interactions in natural environments.

"This is the most prestigious research award given by the Soil Science Society of America," he said. "In accepting this fine honor, I must acknowledge the superb group of graduate students post-doctoral fellows, visiting scientists, and colleagues in academe and industry with whom I have had the privilege to collaborate."

Sparks is the author of "Kinetics of Soil Chemical Reactions," a standard reference in the field. He is the editor of "Soil Physical Chemistry," a book that is used extensively by researchers and students. Sparks recently completed a new text book "Environmental Soil Chemistry," that will be published by Academic Press in 1995. He is the editor of 10 other books and author of 25 book chapters and more than 80 refereed papers.

Sparks has served as technical editor of the Soil Science Society of America Journal, serves as editor of Advances in Agronomy, the most prestigious serial review in the crop and soil sciences, and Geoderma and is a member of the editorial boards of Soil Science and Trends in Soil Science.

Sparks has received many other honors, including Fellow of the Soil Science Society of America and American Society of Agronomy; recipient of the F.D. Chester Distinguished Performance Award from the College of Agricultural Sciences; Research Award of the Northeastern Branch of the American Society of Agronomy; and the M. L. and Chrystie M. Jackson Soil Science Award for the Soil Science Society of America.

"Mayflower" a yearling Southdown/Ram recently received top honors as Supreme Grand Champion Ram overall breeds at the North American Livestock Exposition in Louisville, Kentucky. Bred and owned by Scenic View Farm, Steve and Gary Kwisnek of RD #1 Clarksburg. "Mayflower" qualified after receiving Grand Champion Ram honors at the 1994 National Southdown Show also held in Kentucky.

3 Elected To APHA Board

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Three American Polled Hereford Association (APHA) members were elected to the national board of directors in November.

Jane Evans Cornelius, LaSalle, Colo.; Jim O'Mara, Jackson, Miss.; and Donato Ramos, Laredo, Texas, assumed their Board duties during the 72nd National Convention, Show & Sale in Kansas City, Mo.

Cornelius was elected to represent the states of Colorado, New Mexico, and Wyoming. The owner of Coyote Ridge Ranch, she and her children have been in the Polled Hereford business for 15 years. The ranch's 100 cows and 700 acres started as a 4-H project. Her son, Hampton, and his wife, Kay, now help manage the operation and Cornelius's other children, Coleman and Katie, are also involved.

Cornelius is also a certified public accountant and owns her own firm in Boulder. She has been active in the Colorado-Wyoming Polled Hereford Association (PHA) and served as its secretary from 1987 to 1992. The Colorado Cattlemen's Association, Larimer and Weld County Cattlemen's Associations and the Boulder County 4-H program have also benefited from her leadership.

APHA members in Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi will be represented by O'Mara during the next four years. O'Mara, who owns Broadlawn Farms, began in the registered Polled Hereford business in 1982. Since then, his operation has grown to 100 females on 425 acres. He has served on the Mississippi PHA Board of Directors and as its secretary, was his state's delegate to APHA's Strategic Planning Conference in 1990 is a Mississippi Cattlemen's Association member purebred Polled Hereford business since 1964. Active in the Texas PHA, he has served as its president and on its board of directors. He also sits on the National Cattlemen's Association Beef Research and Education Committee and is involved in many community activities. In addition to managing his ranching enterprises, Ramos is an attorney. He has one daughter, Judy, and two sons, Don David and Freddy.

Winebark Leaves Extension Job To Alter Path Of Troubled Teens

New Year Brings Big Transition For Winebarks

LOU ANN GOOD

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) —

Many people chart a new course of action on New Year's Day, but few make the dramatic changes that Ken and Janet Winebark and their children will undertake this year.

Winebark is Lebanon County's livestock agent, who is known for his dedication to helping 4-H'ers raise successful livestock projects. On January 13, Winebark is giving up that career to be a full-time youth minister — without a guaranteed income.

Winebark said that his decision to switch career tracks actually began three years ago.

A Lay Witness Weekend at the couple's church challenged Winebark to think about what he really was accomplishing in life and where his primary focus lay.

His attention was drawn to two teen boys, the only teen-agers attending his church at that time.

"Would they drop out of going to church just like the other kids did during his teen years?"

church asked him to go bowling with them, Winebark consented.

From the time he rolled that first bowling ball down the alley, Winebark recognized that there was a connectedness between him and the teen-agers.

Meanwhile, his wife sensed that she and Ken should work as a couple by starting a youth group.

"How do you start a youth group with only two kids?" Ken countered.

Reluctantly he agreed to block out a month of Wednesday nights to hold a youth meeting.

"I didn't think the program would fly. Then I could say, I tried, but it didn't work," Winebark said.

Despite Winebark's skepticism, the first night, nine kids attended. The second night, attendance was in the 20s, then the 30s.

"It just soared from there," said Ken, who is still a bit flabbergasted by teens who come "to talk about God."

He said, "The amazing thing is that these teenagers are almost all senior-high-age boys who are

"Kids need to know someone cares. In the world, there doesn't seem to be a whole lot of caring. Everyone is caught up in doing his or her own thing and too busy to help the next person. We let them know that someone does love them and reinforce God's love is there even though we can't always be with them. It gives kids hope at the end of the tunnel," Janet said.

He remembered his wife's concern for the children who attended Rejoice Club, which she directed for ages from four years to fifth grade. She often expressed concern that the children loved the club until fifth grade, when unexplainedly they stopped attending. She pleaded with her husband to get involved, but, he was too busy, he told her.

During that Lay Witness weekend, Winebark sensed an inner urging to become involved in the lives of those two teen-agers who continued to faithfully attend church services.

Inwardly, he argued that he was too busy. After all, his job required two to three evenings away from his wife and two children; he didn't need another night away doing something with other people's kids.

But when the two teens at unchurched."

The Winebarks sense that the growth and the relationships that have developed between the youth and he and his wife is bigger than human explanations.

In fact, they credit it to a series of miracles — with God being the instigator.

Their love for the teen-agers and for God bubbles over in their enthusiasm to tell about "ways that they saw God do again and again."

For example, the Winebarks thought the youth meeting should be held in a gym, but their church had no gym and no money to rent one. After several inquiries, they were given the use of a free gym at the Richland Fire Hall.

"But it was upstairs — small and dark — and it echoed like crazy," Janet said.

With the help of that first gathering of teens, the Winebarks made some renovations to the gym.

Even in that, they credit God for small miracles.

For when they went to buy a basketball hoop, the owner insisted on giving it and a scoreboard to them. They also put up a volleyball net. Another man who works for a snack company donates weekly snacks for the gathering.

The original agenda for the youth program was to play basketball and volleyball for about one hour, have a snack, and then a discussion on such topics as what the Bible has to say about anger, parents, friendships, sex, and God guiding people today.

The Winebarks expected that the kids would be more interested in the social aspect rather than the spiritual content of the meetings.

"Instead, the discussion time is the big drawing card," Ken said. "The kids are eager to learn about God and eager to pray about problems."

"Three years ago, the thought of working with teen-age boys would have 'totally scared me,' Janet said.

"But I knew that it was important that Ken and I work together in this. So many kids don't see parents working together. They need to see stable marriages," she said.

To her surprise when she started working with teen-agers, she felt such love and closeness to the teen-agers that she can easily converse with them.

"Kids need to know someone cares. In the world, there doesn't seem to be a whole lot of caring. Everyone is caught up in doing his or her own thing and too busy to help the next person. We let them know that someone does love them and reinforce God's love is there even though we can't always be with them. It gives kids hope at the end of the tunnel," Janet said.

The teens are encouraged to read the Bible. The Winebarks use the "Youth Bible," written in easy-to-understand language for today's teen-agers.

"We don't push Bibles, but if someone asks for one, we give him or her one," Winebark said. So far, they have given away 75 Bibles.

The Richland gym was made to accommodate only 20 people. When 58 teens started showing up for the meetings, the Winebarks knew changes had to be made.

Despite Ken's search for bigger facilities, he was unable to reach an agreement with any group because gyms were always rented out to sports league groups.

The gymnasium owners were not interested in donating a gym to a group without funds and with questionable characters.

Then the Richland Fire Hall gave the Winebarks one week's notice that they would need to vacate the building.

"That Wednesday night, the teens prayed about finding a meeting place," Janet said. "They were so full of faith and confidence that God would provide. You could really feel God working, and that night 25 of the teens gave their life to Christ."

God did provide a gym — just like the kids expected. The Myerstown Church of the Brethren offered their full-sized new gymnasium. The gym had been fully scheduled to meet the demands of league games, but when the board heard of the Winebarks' work with local youth, they sensed that the "it was God working and that the gym

Ken and Janet Winebark believe the inspiration and guidance they find in the Bible is what teen-agers need in their own lives.

Homestead Notes

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Dear Baby,

It's hard to know how to begin this letter, because I've never written one like it before. But a new year, 1995, is starting and with it, a whole new adventure for us—so this seems like a perfect time.

In one of her recent letters, your mother wrote that she and your daddy have begun writing in a special book their thoughts about you and your arrival next spring. She requested a little note from us to include in this journal about you, which they plan to give you when you become an adult.

First of all, Grandpa and I—and your Grandpa Skip and Grandma Maryann, too—are thrilled about you. After all, you will be the first grandchild for both of us couples. Our one concern about your coming into the world is that you and your mom and dad live so far away from all of us that we won't get to share you nearly enough. Your mom does plan to bring you back for a long visit next summer and we're already looking forward to that. We do realize that you'll be a little young yet to go out to play with the cats and the calves.

Like most grandparents, we have lots of hopes and wishes for you and your future. Most of them you will appreciate most after you grow up and have your own children—this is the usual grownup, boring stuff.

First of all, we wish you a happy and safe childhood. That doesn't mean having everything you want, where you want it, or when you want it. It begins with having two parents who love each other as much as they love you, and you already have that good start for your life. Because they love you, your mom and dad will sometimes make you very happy and sometimes make you very angry as they teach you to be a responsible person. We also wish you the love of learning and the thirst for books that your mom and dad both have, since reading is a very foundation skill for a successful life.

We wish you a sense of enthusiasm. We hope you will grow up with a curiosity that makes you eager to try new things, investigate new places and meet new people. It's a big, wonderful world out here, with so much to experience. But, we hope you'll find time to explore and enjoy the little things as well: birds and butterflies, flowers, walks in the woods, poking around in streams and finding shapes in clouds floating against a blue sky. And we wish that you keep that curiosity all through your life.

We wish you a sense of fairness, justice and the ability to look at all sides of a question before making up your mind. Most decisions you will face in your early years will have simple "Yes" or "No" answers, but as you grow older, there will be a lot of "Maybe's," "What If's?" and "Why not's?" And along with that, we wish you the ability to control the anger that all people have within them, and that you will learn to apply it wisely and only when truly necessary.

We wish you a sense of compassion for others. Only by helping others, in whatever direction your life works out, can you truly be happy within yourself.

We wish you a deep faith in God. Your parents will begin guiding you in that direction from the day you are born, but it will be within your own heart to decide how you act upon that. May you always be quick to turn to God with thanks and for help and guidance. If you dedicate your life to Him, whatever you do will be right.

And, for the immediate future, we wish you a safe and healthy arrival—when the time is ready. Spring is a wonderful time to be born, when all the rest of the world is also fresh, new and bursting with life.

We can hardly wait!

Love, Grandma and Grandpa

Happy New Year!

New Year Brings Big Transition For Winebarks

should be used for something other than the previous plans."

The kids are ecstatic with the find. One high school senior said, "I knew somewhere God had a place and he wouldn't let us down. I couldn't live without On Fire" (the name of the youth group).

The Myerstown gym is within one and a half miles of the Winebarks' home. The size of the gymnasium allows the teens to break into various groups to talk or participate in different sport activities.

A man from the Winebarks church, Richland Church of the Brethren, provides bus transportation for about 30 to 40 percent of the group. The remainder car pool or find their own transportation.

They are thrilled that Ralph Warren, a graduate from Teen Challenge, a Christian drug and alcohol rehabilitation program, became involved in the outreach.

"Ralph is 6'4" and a great basketball player. He plays the guitar and has great rapport with the kids," Winebark said. "And most importantly, he's not afraid to hit the kids square in the eye (tell them the honest truth even if it hurts)."

Typically of their generosity, the Winebarks opened their home to Ralph, who needed a place to stay. After living with them several months, he now has an apartment of his own. The Winebarks have also kept some teens in their home overnight who struggle with severe problems.

The Winebarks see their ministry as more to the whole family rather than only to teens. When problems arise between parents and the teens, the Winebarks are strong supporters in helping them work out their differences.

With two children of their own,

Janine, 10, and Brandon, 8, the most pressing problem for the Winebarks is finding time for everything.

"It got to the point where I knew that I had to make some changes," said Ken, who shared his dilemma with his pastor, who told him that he sensed God had something special for him to do, and that he felt Winebark was called to be a youth minister.

"I was shocked and scared but I knew inside it was the truth," Ken said.

When he shared this insight with Janet, he was surprised when she calmly said that she knew Ken was called to be a youth pastor for a long time.

Ironically, it was on New Year's Day last year that the Winebarks made the decision to go into full-time youth ministry.

Perhaps leaving his extension agent job would not be so difficult if Winebark didn't like his job, but that isn't the case.

"I'm leaving something I really love," Winebark said of his work as extension agent for the past 10 and a half years. "It's been so rewarding to see 8- and 9-year-olds develop into respected leaders in 4-H, as state dairy princesses, and leaders of respected agricultural organizations."

"The change means leaving go of some very important things in my life," Winebark said. "It's leaving my affiliation with agriculture — something I thought would always be part of my life."

Another difficult reason for giving up his job is that Ken firmly believes he works for the best boss in the world — Alletta Schadler, Lebanon County extension director.

Schadler herself gets a bit choked up about Winebark leaving. She said, "His enthusiasm for his job has been most delightful. He has a 'can do' attitude. Ken is always going that extra mile to help people with problems. He has a wonderful record of keeping kids involved in 4-H. He has always gone way beyond the call of duty to create activities and events to teach young people how to succeed in agriculture. His leadership also extended to the non-farming community and has helped them better understand agriculture and how it affects us all."

Winebark said, "Lettie's truly been the best boss in the world. But now, I'm going to work for the boss of the world."

"The change means leaving go of some very important things in my life," Winebark said. "It's leaving my affiliation with agriculture — something I thought would always be part of my life."

For a while Winebark had considered teaching animal science at a local college on a part-time basis, but he realized that he could not give his all to two jobs.

"Jesus gave His all for me, the least I can do is give my all," Winebark said of his decision to devote full time to youth ministry.

It's a new venture not only for Winebark but also his church, which cannot afford to support the family financially. However, the church has set up a fund for people to donate money to support the Winebarks on a missionary basis.

While some people express alarm that Winebark is quitting his job with a stable income to take one that has no guaranteed income, the Winebarks are not at all concerned.

"We have faith that God's going to take care of us. We have absolutely no fear about finances. God did too many miracles and led us this far," Winebark said.

The Winebarks have a cache of stories about God's care for them. Not the least of which is allowing he and Janine to show the top gilts and market hogs at the state Farm Show.

"It was always Daddy's (Ken's) big dream to win at the Farm Show when he was growing up, but he never did," Janet said.

In Janine's first year in 4-H last year, she chose a pig that was trampled on and should have died. In fact, the vet suggested the Winebarks dispose of it, but Janine was

After a hastily organized family conference, the Winebarks decided to donate the prize money back into the Farm Show scholarship fund.

Since then, Winebark was offered $1,000 for the sow that produced the gilt, but the family cannot part with family pet that rolls over when her belly is scratched.

It's examples like this that have built the Winebarks' faith that God is a God of miracles who will provide whatever is needed.

The couple say they are not big spenders. Although Janet is a full-time mother and has not brought in additional income, the Winebarks made their last mortgage payment in December on the 5 1/2-acre property that they purchased 10 years ago.

Winebark admits that financial concerns have never bothered him. He lets his wife take care of bill paying. Although Janet had told him that she felt impressed to make double payments on their mortgage for quite some time, Winebark was surprised to find out that the month he had designated as his first month in full-time ministry was the month after the final mortgage payment was made.

Despite the absence of a mortgage payment, money is still needed to support the family, but the Winebarks are so assured of their calling that they do not waver in their belief that God will provide.

Donations earmarked for the Winebarks may be sent to Richland Church of the Brethren, 215 S. Race St. Box 677, Richland, PA 17087.

Consuming Thoughts

Penn State Extension Home
Economist For Berks Co.

Dieting during and after the Holidays can be difficult, but if you intend to lose weight or at least maintain your current weight, you need to develop a plan now to deal with temptation.

First you need to outline specifically what you want to happen and what positive reinforcements will help you carry out your plan. Next, tell family and friends what you've done, so they can understand and support you.

No matter how committed you are to changing behaviors, you may need some mental preparation to resist when others encourage behavior that defeats your goals. Here are a few suggestions that may enable you to pursue your weight goals:

- No one's feelings should be hurt if you say, "No, thank you," firmly and repeatedly, when others try to dissuade you from a plan. Politely explain what you're trying to do and ask for their support and help.

- You don't have to eat a lot to accommodate anyone (this includes your mother, business clients or your host or hostess).

- When you entertain, serve lighter, more healthful low-fat meals. Try some new recipes. This can be a useful step to changing your overall approach to cooking.

- Parties and social occasions built around food are often difficult, but not impossible, to deal with. If it's your party, plan an activity like caroling or ice skating rather than just eating food. When you attend parties where food is everywhere, eat a low-fat salad (such as a fruit salad) before you go, opt for pretzels or plain crackers to snack on, and chat with others as far away from the food table as possible.

- Learn to handle "put-downs," whether they're inadvertent or conscious. "You'll never be able to stick to that diet" is a common put-down. An effective response can be to communicate feelings honestly, without hostility. Tell them that their remarks are discouraging and that you are working to change your habits and need understanding and support from them.

- In your own kitchen remember to cook leaner, not only during the holidays, but throughout the year. Without making major eating changes, you can cut back on the fat in your diet by careful selection of ingredients and cooking techniques.

For example:

- Season vegetables with lemon juice or herbs instead of butter or margarine.

- Trim visible fat off meat before cooking.

- Use non-stick cookware.

- Extend meat, poultry or fish in main dishes and casseroles by adding low-fat ingredients like pasta, rice, grains, vegetables and dried beans.

- Use low-fat or nonfat salad dressings.

- Use low-fat cooking methods like baking, broiling, boiling, poaching, roasting and microwaving.

Eye Disease Spreading In House Finch Population

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — An eye disease affecting house finches—a species of bird common at backyard feeders—has been found in 10 eastern states.

"The disease is a form of conjunctivitis similar to the eye infection humans can get," says Dr. Margaret Brittingham, associate professor of wildlife resources in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "In finches, this disease can be fatal because it seals the birds' eyelids shut. The birds cannot see to feed, and they starve."

House finches are small, gray birds, about the size of sparrows. The males have raspberry-colored heads. The birds flock to bird feeders in large numbers and travel long distances, which could contribute to the spread of the disease. Although it's not necessary to remove bird feeders, homeowners are encouraged to disinfect them with household bleach about once a week.

"Scientists believe the disease is caused by a mycoplasma, a bacteria without a cell wall," says Brittingham. "Chickens and turkeys also can be infected by this bacteria, which is spread through the air. It's a mystery how the disease is spread among finches."

Brittingham is tracking the progression of the infection in individual birds. She asks people with feeders to keep a close watch on birds and to notify her if they see any finches or other bird species with crusted eyes. "It's important to learn as quickly as possible how this disease affects bird populations," she says.

Brittingham can be reached at (814) 863-8442.

Breakfast Ideas You Won't Skip

The best breakfasts have an element of surprise and delight...healthy is great but, unless food also tastes great, nobody — particularly the kids — is eager to eat it.

With today's hectic schedules, time and ease of preparation are obviously also critical factors.

Pairing meat with a part-skim milk cheese — both excellent protein sources — offer a variety of wholesome, energy-boosting ways to start the day.

Everyone loves pizza and the shortcut mini pizzas with pizzazz give a savory twist to tradition. Complete with colorful veggies — a hidden nutritional plus — they take advantage of leftover cooked meat.

Pie for breakfast? Why not if it's blue cheese and roasted red pepper tart? Try these intriguing recipes to make breakfast the favorite meal of the day.

PANCAKES WITH SAUSAGE GRAVY

Pancakes:

- 2 cups Bisquick mix
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup milk

Beat eggs and milk. Add Bisquick and mix well. Fry in skillet until lightly browned on both sides. While frying pancakes makes sausage gravy.

Sausage:

- 1 to 2 pieces leftover sausage
- 1 teaspoon butter
- 2 cups milk
- 2 tablespoons flour

Cut leftover fried sausage into tiny pieces. Fry lightly in butter. Add milk to the sausage. Bring to the boiling point. Mix flour and a little water and use it to thicken the sausage and milk.

Spoon sausage gravy over warm pancakes and enjoy.

Bob and Annette Hughes operate Rainbow Apiaries on their East Earl farm. In addition to selling honey, the commercial beekeepers also make numerous types of candles from beeswax and have bee and candle making supplies.

Hughes also will be teaching two different courses at the Garden Spot High School Adult Education Program. One is beekeeping and the other is candlemaking. For more information, look for the feature story on the Hughes in this section.

Here is a recipe for homemade bread with honey that Hughes often makes.

COLONIAL YEAST BREAD

- 1/2 cup cornmeal
- 1/2 cup honey
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 cups boiling water
- 1/2 cup vegetable oil
- 2 packages dry yeast
- 1/2 cup warm water
- 1/2 cup whole wheat flour
- 1/2 cup rye flour
- 4 1/2 - 5 1/2 cups flour

In a mixing bowl, combine cornmeal, honey, salt, boiling water and oil. Let cool to lukewarm. Meanwhile, dissolve yeast in warm water and let stand 5 minutes. Stir into cornmeal mixture. Add whole wheat flour, rye flour, and enough all-purpose flour to form stiff dough. Turn out onto a floured board; knead until smooth and elastic, about 6 to 8 minutes. Place in a greased bowl; cover and let rise in a warm place until doubled, about 1 1/2 hours. Punch down dough. Divide into two balls. Cover and let rest 10 minutes. Shape into 2 loaves and place in two loaf pans.

Cover and let rise until doubled, about 1 1/2 hours. Bake at 375 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes. Cover loosely with foil if top browns too quickly. Remove from pans and cool.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

New Year's Eve and another year before us to do our best. There are always lots of decisions to make. Every day brings new problems to be solved or taken care of in some manner. We remember the past but plan for the future.

Recently, I met with a group who discussed giving to charitable organizations. We had some figures that showed what percent of the group's income actually went to promote their programs. Many ranged from only 60 percent up to actually spending 94.7 percent to help particular communities.

The question presented was, "How much should you give?" Many organizations have mailings several times a year and they expect you to respond each time. Some groups do not work with "United Way" but send separate pleas. The consensus seemed to be "give" but keep enough for yourself. That is a hard decision to make.

Money has always been important to people. Some like to have cash at hand while others save it in a bank account. There are stories told of folks burying gold. In fact, the people who lived on our farm centuries ago were said to have buried some but I doubt the story is true.

Years ago I stopped for gas in Ohio just as the station was closing. In order to give me change, the attendant went into the station and counted along the wall to the seventh cannister. Here he had put the day's money. People store money under rugs, in refrigerators, in cookie jars and in dresser drawers.

Sharing what we have is a decision we must all make. There are so many people in need that the job of helping them seems overwhelming. But, we are told that every little bit helps.

HAPPENINGS

4-H Achievement Night

The Bucks County 4-H Achievement Night was held on Dec. 4 at the Lenape Valley Presbyterian Church in New Britain.

This awards program honors outstanding 4-H members, community supporters, and volunteer 4-H leaders. Recipients of the "I Dare You Awards" were Gina Ciocci and Samantha Cote. Alan Davis of Davis Feed Mills was honored as "Friend of 4-H" for his continuing support of the Bucks County 4-H Program.

Kristen Joyce, Langhorne, and Jaclyn Parry, Newtown, received the Bucks County 4-H Clover Award for outstanding citizenship, leadership, and personal development.

Both are president of their respective 4-H clubs. Joyce, Edgewood 4-H Club, Yardley, has been a project leader for pet care and Horse and Clover. She raises rabbits and sells them as pets. She was captain of the county rabbit knowledge bowl team which placed third in competition.

Parry, Seeing Eye Puppy 4-H Club, raises puppies for the Seeing Eye. She won blue ribbons at the Southeast 4-H Regional Small Animal Show and has given many Seeing Eye Puppy demonstrations, including one at the Devon Horse Show and the N.J. Library for the Blind. She attended a 4-H Leadership Conference at Millersville University and traveled to Japan for an international 4-H exchange program.

Bucks County 4-H presented the Junior Cloverleaf award to youth for leadership and responsibility at the 4-H Achievement recognition event. The youth receiving the award in the 8 to 11 year old category were Linnie Darmofal, Doylestown, Seeing Eye Puppy Club; Kendall Dimmick, Quakertown, Spurs 'N Burrs 4-H Club; Michelle Naudascher, Milford Square, Milford 4-H Club; and Leigh Ward, Riegelsville, Spurs 'N Burrs 4-H club.

Three youth were selected in the 12-13 year old category. They were Jenna Hadley, Springtown, Springtown 4-H Club; Brooke Imhof, Sellersville, Seeing Eye Puppy Club; and Erin Toal, Kintnersville, Round A Bit 4-H Club.

These annual awards highlight 4-H accomplishments and leadership skill development in local communities. The 4-H Club program is available to youth age 8 to 19 years. For details, call Penn State Cooperative Extension, Bucks County, (610) 345-3283.

4-H Project

Each year the Adams County 4-H program involves more than 1,100 youth in the 4-H Embryology School Enrichment Project.

Why is the 4-H embryology project popular? One reason is its simplicity. The only two items needed are a functioning incubator to maintain proper temperatures, humidity levels and ventilation, and fresh fertile eggs. Once the incubator has been warmed up for 24 hours and the eggs placed inside, the project is under way.

Special thanks to Wampler Longacre—Round Hill for providing the financial support to replace the classroom incubators. Wampler provided funds to purchase fifteen new incubators for the 4-H embryology project which is a vital part to the chick hatching experience.

The 4-H embryology program, because of its structure, is well adapted to the classroom. It helps youth apply basic principles of mathematics, science, English, and health through a "learn-by-doing" experience.

Managing an incubator with two dozen fertile eggs is part of this "hands-on" 4-H project which is conducted in the classroom. The 4-H members turn the eggs regularly and maintain proper temperature, humidity and ventilation in their classroom incubator. 4-H members can see the heart beating and later hear the chick peep from inside the shell. It becomes very exciting, not only for the class involved, but for other students in the school as well.

Teachers report that this project helps to increase motivation of students and teaches responsibility. Each student takes an active part in the project by turning eggs, recording temperature, and helps with overall management of the incubator.

A 4-H promotional program is presented to each classroom at the end of the embryology project. Each student has the opportunity if they wish, to become involved in 4-H in Adams County. Students receive a folder at the conclusion of the 4-H Embryology project and they are provided by 4-H Clubs of Adams County, Inc. The 4-H Embryology project is only one part of Adams County's 4-H youth program.

QUESTION — Karen Kinnane, Shartlesville, would like the following recipes: One for a bright red two-layer cake with a creamy white icing like that sold at a snack stand in Renninger's Antiques Market, Adamstown. One for homemade root beer or non-alcoholic ginger beer. One for a cold light as air lemon-flavored dessert served in tiny parfait glasses, which is called Lemon Melting Moments (not a pudding, but with the texture and weight of whipped cream, served in a fancy New York Restaurant in the 1970s.

QUESTION — Karen Kinnane, Shartlesville, would like a recipe for garlic ring bolonga, for clear cranberry jelly that can be molded in shapes; for a yeast bread shaped like a dragon, which is sold every year at an antique show on Church Lane, N.J. Karen writes that she has never been able to even taste one because the baker only makes two and the "help" buy them before the sale opens. The dragon appears to have an egg wash which gives a shiny golden brown color and a raisin in the eye.

QUESTION — Mrs. Wayne L. Miller, Bruceton Miles, W. Va., would like recipes using cabbage, for oranges, and for coconuts. She also wants a recipe for pumpkin butter and a very rich cookie dough that is crisp but not hard, which may be iced between layers and served at weddings or on other special occasions. Also, she wants a recipe for frosting used on wedding or birthday cakes that is not greasy. She also wants more salad dressings made from scratch.

QUESTION — Mrs. Lewis Kofron, Claymont, Del., wants a recipe for Philadelphia sticky buns.

QUESTION — Dolly Getz, Manheim, would like a recipe for homemade vanilla fudge that does not require lengthy cooking.

QUESTION — Louise Graybeal, Renick, W. Va., would like a recipe for pancake syrup that is light in calories.

QUESTION — Louise Graybeal, Renick, W. Va., remembers that her mother made herb seasoned stuffing with onions, celery, etc., which was formed into balls and baked. They were really crunchy on the outside and soft on the inside. Louise thinks it is a German recipe that was passed down through the family but never written. Every Thanksgiving and Christmas her mother made them and lots of little fingers picked them out of the pan before dinner was ready, she writes.

QUESTION — I.M. Filler, Brookfield, Mass., would like a recipe for stuffed pumpkin or as one friend called it, Poor Man's Turkey. She thinks it is an old New England recipe.

QUESTION — Sherry Craner of Bridgeton, N.J., would like the recipe for the best meatloaf.

QUESTION — A reader would like a recipe for raise cakes that her grandmother made years ago. She knows the cakes contained yeast, mashed potatoes, and had a sugar glaze on top. The cakes were always made in a single layer in cake pans.

QUESTION — Jean Nestler, Halifax, would like a recipe for lime gelatin and cottage cheese salad that was served at the Harvest House Restaurant in Colonial Park during the early 1970s.

QUESTION — Anne Wiegler, Pottstown, would like a recipe for pickled herring. She wrote that years ago, her family made it by cleaning, splitting, and deheading the herring. The fish was salted and packed in barrels. The fish juice leaked out and formed the brine. She needs to know the ratio of salt to pounds of fish.

QUESTION — Velma Winters, Manheim, would like a recipe for baked potato soup.

QUESTION — M.J. Howard, Columbus, N.J., wants a recipe for the ham and bean soup that was sold at the Gordonville Fire Co. Builder's Sale on October 16.

ANSWER — Linda Fisher, Ronks, wanted a recipe for salsa, either hot or mild. Thanks to G.F.'s Kitchen in Somerset County and to Stan's Kitchen for sending recipes.

Salsa

6 to 8 cups tomatoes, blanched, peeled, drained
2 cups finely chopped jalapeno peppers
1 cup chopped onions
3 to 4 teaspoons salt
3 teaspoons garlic powder
Blanch and peel tomatoes, cut in large chunks and allow to drain in colander before measuring for a chunkier salsa. Chop peppers (adjust amount of peppers to taste) and onions in food processor.

Put all ingredients in a large kettle. Cook one hour or until desired thickness. Pour into hot pint jars and adjust lids. Water bath for 35 minutes. To blanch tomatoes, dip in boiling water for 30 seconds to one minute to loosen skins.

Salsa Picante Sauce

10 pounds tomatoes
6 to 20 hot peppers (the more seed used the hotter the sauce)
10 sweet bell peppers
½ cup brown sugar, packed
4 tablespoons salt
6 to 8 big sweet onions
½ cup vinegar
1 tablespoon chili powder
½ teaspoon turmeric
Bring ingredients to a boil then simmer 30 minutes to one hour.

ANSWER — Anne Crist, Airville, wanted a recipe to make root beer in a gallon jar and set in the sun for a day. Thanks to Pauline Martin, New Holland, for sending a recipe.

Root Beer

2 cups sugar
1 gallon lukewarm water
(Use hot water to dissolve sugar). Add:
4 teaspoons root beer extract
1 teaspoon yeast
Put in jars. Cover and let set in the sun four hours. Chill before serving. Ready to serve the next day.

ANSWER — Betty Evans, Pequea, has been looking for years for an old recipe for roll-out sugar cookies that are soft and look like they rise during baking. When cool, the cookies are frosted. Thanks to Linda Boyer, Narvon, who writes that when she saw the request, she knew that she had the recipe Betty's been looking for. She said this recipe comes from her great-great-grandmother. It was copied from her cooking journal that was written in German. She writes, roll them thin and they get crisp; roll them as thick, as ¼ - ½ -inch and they get puffy when baking and will be soft with a melt-in-your-mouth taste that cannot be beat. They are a holiday favorite with the Boyers that she makes year-round.

Grammy Mint's Cut-Out Cookies

2 cups brown sugar
5 eggs
2 cups butter
8 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
Bake at 375 degrees for 10 minutes. Cool. Icing and decorate to taste or sugar before baking. Either way, the cookies taste great.

Survey Finds Limited Understanding Of Food, Farms

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co.) — A recent survey conducted in southeastern Pennsylvania suggests that consumers could have a better understanding of how local farms fit into a broader food system that includes processors, markets and the government.

Researchers in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and the Rodale Institute in Kutztown surveyed more than 1,200 shoppers at 23 supermarkets and farmers' markets in eight southeastern Pennsylvania counties in 1993.

"We asked people about social, economic and environmental aspects of agriculture in the region, as well as their thoughts on buying fresh fruits and vegetables," says Dr. Joan Thomson, associate professor of rural sociology at Penn State.

"Overall, their answers suggest that these consumers have a limited understanding of how food is produced or how farms influence the economy and the environment, but some of their responses accurately reflect the dilemmas facing agriculture today."

For instance, about 80 percent of consumers believe that farming is important to the region's economy and nearly 60 percent believe that southeastern Pennsylvania needs local farms because the region "cannot always rely on getting food from other places." But less than 30 percent of people surveyed believe that the children of today's farmers are likely to continue farming.

"People don't expect today's farm children to continue farming, yet they believe we can't rely on other areas for all of our food," Thomson notes. "People don't seem to think about what will happen in the future if no one in the area wants to farm."

Although many consumers believe food should be grown locally, most do not go out of their way to get locally grown fruits and vegetables. "Seventy-five percent of consumers said they would prefer to buy locally grown produce," says Peggy Wagoner, project leader at the Rodale Institute. "But for convenience, 60 percent prefer to buy fruits and vegetables at the supermarket, where much of the produce is grown out of the state or even out of the country."

Seven in 10 respondents believe that less than half of the fresh produce we eat comes from Pennsylvania. "This is accurate," says Wagoner. "Other studies have shown that the Northeast depends upon other regions for 92 percent of its fresh produce."

Consumers do realize the impact they can have through the purchases they make. More than 80 percent believe their food purchases influence farming in southeastern Pennsylvania and what is in the grocery store.

To encourage purchases of locally grown produce, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association both have a logo to identify Pennsylvania produce. "Unfortunately, less than 30 percent of the respondents were able to identify either of the two logos," says Wagoner.

Questions about agricultural issues and practices revealed confusion about the role of farms and environmental quality. "Substantial numbers of respondents—two out of 10—were not sure that farming affects the quality of drinking water, although more than 60 percent believe that it does," says Thomson.

Close to 60 percent of respondents expressed interest in knowing how food is grown, and more than 80 percent of those respondents wanted to know about the use of agrichemicals.

"Some seemed convinced that none of the farmers in southeastern Pennsylvania, or even the United States, use agrichemicals," Thomson notes. "Mention of other aspects of farming, such as soil conservation, was negligible."

The researchers will continue to analyze the data by various demographic categories to help target future educational materials. Rochelle Kelvin, who initiated the project with Thomson, currently is working on organic farms in New Zealand. Peggy Wagoner will succeed Kelvin as project leader at the Rodale Institute.

Their results cannot be generalized to the entire population of the state or country.

ANSWER — Rosemary Mattiuz, Kersey, wanted a recipe for liverwurst since the family butchers their own pigs and has lots of liver to use. Thanks to G. Wismer, Plumstead, for sending a recipe.

Liverwurst

Use the trimmings of a pig's head by removing all you can. Add to the heart, kidney, and any other meat you do not have a use for. Grind everything, including the pork fat in the amount you prefer. Boil until soft. Put through the grinder with half the pig's liver, 2 pounds onions, spices if you prefer, salt, pepper, and small amount of marjoram. Mix well. Stuff into casings. Smoke if you prefer. If not put in casings, put into a pan, let cool. Cut in portions and then freeze.

Guess Who Is New On The Farm

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

Carol and Pete Heth raise 17 emu on their farm in Columbia. They have fallen in love with the long-legged birds that can grow six-feet tall. Although emu have wings, they cannot fly. They are part of the ratite family.

Carol said that the family began raising emu two years ago when they invested some money in the birds as a college fund for their children, Alysa, 18; Patrick, 16; and Katie, 13.

The family also raise sheep, chickens, and a refugee pot-bellied pig on the farm. The family considered raising buffalo, but that would have required getting rid of the sheep.

After talking with several folks who raise emu and visiting several farms, the Heths purchased their first emu pair, Amos and Ann.

"Emu have a great personality and are fun and interesting," Carol said. "They are just like any other animal. The more time you spend with them, the more responsive they become."

Amos is known to lay his head on Carol and fall asleep.

Generally, people purchase emu in pairs. A pair may have 20 to 40 chicks in one breeding season.

Females lay three eggs every three days. In the wild, after a female lays an egg, the male sits on the eggs and raises the chicks. Typically, a female will have three different mates each year.

The Heths choose a mate for each one, but sometimes the birds are very choosy and will reject a potential mate.

Because the eggs need to be kept at 97.5 degrees, the embryos will not survive in local temperatures, so breeders put the newly-laid eggs in incubators.

The eggs are sturdy and thick-shelled with a dark green color.

Eggs range in size, with females normally laying larger eggs each season. The size of the egg is not an indication of the size of the chick, which is about the size of a light-bulb at birth.

It takes 52 days in the incubator before the chicks are ready to hatch. If the electric goes off only 30 minutes is allowed to elapse or the egg will not survive non-incubated temperatures. The Heths have an alarm that sounds when the electric goes off so that they can switch to a generator to keep the incubator running.

"Before the unhatched chick is born, the Heths whistle close to the shell and the chick will peep back.

"When the chicks hatch, it's hard to believe that such a large chick can fit inside the egg shell," Carol said.

The chicks are kept warm under a heat lamp and like to snuggle against a stuffed animal when it's time to sleep. An emu chick grows very fast. At three months old, it is about 3 1/2 -feet tall.

After the brown and yellow chicks hatch, they soon act like spoiled kids. They follow family members and even the dog around.

"Gretchen, the dog, looks like the Pied Piper as she walks around the barnyard with all the chicks following in single file," Carol said.

Generally the birds seem to be curious about noises and will follow a person mowing the grass around the lawn, but some birds are fearful of new noises and people if the chicks haven't been pampered individually when growing up.

"Even after the chicks are grown, they think they are people instead of birds," Carol said. "If we sit on the patio they will come and sit with us."

Emus begin laying eggs between 18 months and three years. They will lay for 25 years and live to be about 30 years old.

A microchip is inserted in each chick at birth for security reasons. The chicks are fed specially-formulated pellets.

Emu are structured similar to turkey and chicken but taste more like beef. The meat is a very lean (97 percent fat free) red meat. It is higher in protein, vitamin C, and iron than beef, and lower in cholesterol than chicken.

The meat contains no chemical additives or preservatives. An opportunity to taste emu will be given at the State Farm Show.

Also, a taste comparison will be held at the Farm Show on Wednesday, when local celebrities will be served both beef and emu and asked to determine which is which.

Currently, emu meat that is sold commercially is imported from Australia, but Texas will begin slaughtering it next year. The Pennsylvania Emu chapter is working to get USDA approval to slaughter emu meat in this state.

Emu are very friendly and curious about people and noises, Carol said of the emu she raises on the farm.

No part of the emu is wasted. Fashionable leather handbags, boots, and apparel are made from the body hide. The skin from the legs has a dramatic reptilian texture, which fashion designers find a suitable substitute for hides from endangered species. Emu feathers, eggs, and toenails are used for unique jewelry and crafts.

One of the most exciting products, Carol believes, is natural emu oil used in lotion, creams, perfumes, lip balm, and skin and hair products.

According to Carol, the emu has a layer of oil beneath its hide that does not penetrate the meat. An emu yields an average of 5 to 6 liters of natural oil. Emu oil is known to be penetrating and healing. Carol said a local high school uses it for athletes who receive muscle injuries, and people who use the oil say that it brings quick healing to bursitis, arthritis, and eczema. In testing, a burn center found that when emu oil is used on burns there is little or no scarring.

"Sometimes I feel like I'm selling snake oil," Carol said in reference to the reputation of snake oil being sold as a cure-all, "but emu oil really works."

Carol declines to say how much an emu costs since prices vary considerably depending on genetics and if it is a proven breeder pair. "We call emu the 'turkey of the '90s,'" Carol said. According to Carol, turkeys were first introduced into the area in the 1920s. At that time, turkeys were very expensive but have decreased in price.

Carol foresees emu becoming as popular as turkey. She said, "When emu are raised 10 acres of land, 9,000 pounds of meat can be produced compared to only 500 pounds of beef raised on the same amount of land."

Bob has about 50 bee hives in different hues, hence the name Rainbow Apiaries.

Rainbow Apiaries Provides Training For Beekeeping, Honey Extraction, Candlemaking

LOU ANN GOOD

Lancaster Farming Staff
EAST EARL (Lancaster Co.)

"We call this a Ma and Pa operation down on the farm," said Bob Hughes.

Their down-on-the-farm operation on Turkey Hill Road is a bee farm, where Hughes and his wife Annette sell everything from honey to beeswax candle supplies.

Although they have a small barn set up for their business, the majority of the candle-making is done in their home. That's because it's more convenient and economical.

"It's a cottage business," Hughes said. "In here we have heat in the winter, air conditioning in the summer, running water, phone, and a television. We'd have to pay a fortune to have all that in the barn."

The sweet aroma of honeycomb lingers in the oak kitchen that is filled with candle molds, stacks of beeswax, honey and completed candles.

"We don't try to be a craft store, but we do have a lot," Annette said of the couple's supply of candle making accessories.

Another room of their home is stacked with boxes ready to fill the many mailorders the Hughes receive for honey and candle supplies and equipment. They even ship to Germany because made in Germany tastes quite differently than that from Pennsylvania.

Many different types of molds are used for candle making. Cast-iron, pop-up, lifetime, candy molds, and even imported ones from Holland are used to produce everything from tapers to figurines. Candles are also formed by dipping the wick in hot wax. Longenberger molds, made for cookies, work well with beeswax. After the wax hardens to the shape of the figurine, it is removed from the mold. The next day, a soft cloth is used to buff it to a soft gloss or to be painted.

"We don't throw anything away," Annette said. If candles become old or if they don't turn out quite right, the wax is remelted and formed into new candles.

The easiest way, the Hughes have found, to melt wax is in old coffee percolators, which prevents fires from erupting since wax is highly flammable. It takes about 20 to 30 minutes to melt a potful.

Since beeswax has a much higher melting point than paraffin, beeswax candles burn much slower and longer than those made from lower quality waxes.

Natural beeswax varies from a light honey color to a golden brown sheen. For those who prefer other shades, the Hughes have 40 different colors.

The Hughes said to make candles last longer, chill the candles in the refrigerator and the candle will burn almost double the ordinary timespan. If bloom (a dull finish) appears on a candle, warm it with a hairdryer or wash in soapy water and buff to a shiny sheen.

Recently, the couple branched out into maple syrup. They also have flavored honey for pancakes and ice cream in flavors such as cinnamon, lemon, cherry, and raspberry.

Hughes keeps about 50 hives on his farm and in neighboring areas. The hives are painted in different colors, hence the name, Rainbow Apiaries.

Although the industry has had problems with mites infiltrating the hives, Bob said that a mite resistant queen is being developed.

"If you practice good beekeeping, many problems can be avoided," he said.

Bob was only 15 years old when he first developed an interest in beekeeping. After school, he worked on Chicago's loading docks, where he unloaded tractor-trailer loads of packaged bees all night long.

After a stint in the service, Bob married and moved to Chicago's suburbs where he purchased live honey bees from the Sears and Roebuck catalog.

"No one was here to help me. So I dumped bees in one hand and held the book in the other," he said.

With hundreds of acres of prairie land, there was always something in bloom, which allowed Bob to extract many different flavors of honey.

Honey varies in taste according to the flowers on which they feed, the weather, and how it's blended.

When his job transferred him to Lancaster County in 1965, Bob bought a small farm at an auction. He helped children set up a bee project for a church project where the profits were given to charity.

Pennsylvania Star Farmer Shawn Eberly started raising Polled Herefords when he was in ninth grade. Now, the 22-year-old Shawn has 59 head, which are specially bred for breeding purposes. Through careful keeping of records, Shawn has earned the FFA American Farmer Degree and the Pennsylvania Star Farmer Degree.

'My Heart Is For Full-Time Farming' Says 22-Year-Old

LOU ANN GOOD

Lancaster Farming Staff STEVENS (Lancaster Co.) — Shawn Eberly's goal is to become a full-time farmer. He's 22 years old, has recently received both the American and the Star Farmer FFA Degree, and owns 59 head of Polled Herefords.

Sounds like he's well on his way. But Shawn doesn't foresee a quick transition to a full-time farming career.

For starters, land around here is too expensive, he said. Besides, living at home as a single person saves on living expenses and allows him to pour his full-time salary into buying more cattle. And he can't discount the help from family members pitching in and helping with the cattle.

"I couldn't do it without them," Shawn said of his parents and extended family members.

Shawn's parents, William and Diane Eberly, not only help with the animals but also are flexible in adjusting his work schedule at the family business, E&G Concrete, owned by his parents and Clarence Gebhart. Shawn recognizes that he certainly would not have the flexibility of taking a day off for hay-making or showing cattle if he had other employers.

Shawn's grandfather, Harry Foreman, owns the farm where Shawn raises the cattle, helps in the hayfield, repairs fences, and assists with many cattle-related duties. His brother, Philip, 19, sister Allison, 15, and cousin Jeremy Gehman fill in.

The family has always been there for each other as his parents have made a conscious effort to teach their children by example to always help each other when help is needed. It's a way of life that they want to see passed on through the generations.

Shawn's mother manages the family's Red Rose Paint Farms, a horse farm where they breed and train registered paint horses. When Shawn began the ag program at Garden Spot High School, he used his work experience with the horses as production ag projects.

"But I always had the notion in back of my mind to work with cows," Shawn said. "Because I didn't know much about them, Pop said that if you want to do it, check with different breeders before you make the decision."

His mother's advice was, "Make sure you get an easy-to-handle breed."

Shawn spent a few years talking about the "in's and out's" of various breeds with those who raised them.

"In my senior year, everything came together," he said.

That was the year that Shawn met Frank Darcey of Darcey Farms, Fairfield, at the Beef Expo. A breeder of registered Polled Herefords, Darcey asked Shawn to accompany the group on the show circuit to Kentucky.

"It was a hands-on education," Shawn said of his work as an apprentice with the Darcey Farm team. "It reaffirmed my desire to raise seed stock."

Darcey advised Shawn on his purchase of five cow calf pairs and a heifer.

His advice from Darcey proved to be profitable. The first year, one of Shawn's herd offspring was selected for the Penn State Bull Test.

"That's where they select 75 head — cream of the crop — of all the different breeds. They take them in October and feed the bulls the same way. They monitor the bulls with a computer collar and keep stats on each one," Shawn said.

In the spring, the bulls that make it through the process are sold.

Although his first bull was eliminated at the end, since then, Eberly has had four bulls selected and one is now on test.

His success has allowed Shawn to sell most of his stock privately. Most bulls go to commercial herds with the idea of raising the seedstock.

"My whole idea is to raise seed stock to better the breed to produce better meat for the plate," said Shawn, who follows the breed association's guidelines to determine which bulls complement which cows.

Shawn keeps careful records on each calf, which is weaned at 205 days. A feeding program for yearling requires that each be fed grain daily in the amount of one to two percent of body weight.

The calves are born and kept at the home farm until they are weaned. Cattle are put out to pasture for rotational grazing in five to six-acre lots.

"That gets the most use out of the land without wearing it out," Eberly said.

Moisture determines how quickly the herd is rotated. Eberly said, "Last year we had so much moisture, I didn't need to rotate them much."

During the winter months, cattle are fed hay when grass is not plentiful. After the cows are weaned at 600 to 650 pounds or 205 days, they are moved to a rented area about 20 minutes away.

Weight gains average 2.9 to 3.1 pounds a day.

Those animals do not come up

to standards are steered and sold privately in the spring for beef.

"It's a good outlet for steers better than taking them to market, but not something that I want to get into in a big way," Eberly said.

"I don't like to say I fatten steers, I prefer to say fit, because I raise a good lean meat and have them butchered at 1,200 pounds. With their genetics, they put on weight fast. Everyone enjoys the meat," Eberly said.

"Because I raise Polled Herefords on a small scale, I treat each one as an individual rather than as a feedlot. A lot of people want to really fatten steers, but I want to fill them out according to their conformation and frame. Some need to fill out more than others. Nobody likes to sit a table and peel off the fat."

In 1993, Eberly bought the rights to flush a cow. Out of 25 eggs flushed, 16 were considered good viable eggs. Thirteen were implanted and three were frozen. Of the 13 embryos, nine cows became pregnant. Six heifers and three bulls were born in September. The heifers and one bull will be retained for the herd and the other two bulls will be sold.

Eberly is most proud of a gold trophy bull and dam. The dam is FHC CL Dominette 32P that was sired by Stone Ridge Sting, a 1993 trait leader.

Both Eberly and Darcey own SBF Royal Rancha 9215, which was a senior bull calf champion as a yearling at the National Genetic Focus Show in Kansas City in 1993. The bull, which also won shows in five different states, is out of SBF Royal Gypsy, a #4 Gold Trophy Dam.

"I'm not into showing heavily. I show enough locally so people know what I have but that's not my main thrust. My main thrust is to raise good quality seedstock," he said.

Eberly rents about 200 acres to grow various mixes of timothy and alfalfa for his herd. He also supplies hay for the family horse farm. He sells the excess and also does custom square baling.

Eberly said, "I consider myself blessed. Productivity has been blessed. My heart is for full-time farming. I'm at the point where I'll soon need to farm full-time or downscale while continuing to work elsewhere."

Eberly estimates he needs about 400 to 500 acres for his farming operation to be successful, but said that he can't afford to buy in this area.

He considered moving to another state, but that has plenty of drawbacks. He said, "Living here, I have a wealth of resources to draw from."

Because the concrete business is located on the farm, Eberly can take his equipment to the full-time mechanic employed there whenever needed. Plus, he has many family members to help with the work. On an average day, Eberly rises at 4 a.m. and works to 10 p.m.

Eberly has his own horse and would like to get into roping, but he said, "I've been so busy that I only had about five minutes to ride horse this summer."

His graduation present was spending the summer at a Montana grading ranch. He helped ride the cattle to five different ranches, while the cattle grazed through 15 miles.

The whole family is enthusiastic about the Polled Herefords.

"It's a nice breed to work with. You can throw a halter on most of them and lead them out to pasture," Eberly said.

Eberly and his grandfather also raise turkeys, rhea, and ring-neck pheasants on the farm.

FFA project-keeping records have enabled Eberly to receive the American Degree and also be named the 1994 Pennsylvania Star Farmer.

About 10,000 Families Raise Emu

DALLAS, Texas — About 3,000 emu ranchers from 48 states, Australia, Canada, China, Mexico and Spain were delighted to learn last week that the first official census of the flightless birds indicates as many as 500,000 pen-raised emus in the U.S. — six times more than officials previously estimated and more than Australia's captive emus population.

That was just one of the many surprises confronting attendees at the Fifth Annual American Emu Assn. (AEA) Convention & Exposition in Nashville (Aug. 4-6). Results of oil and other product studies as well as a significant array of emu-related merchandise also demonstrated a growing interest in and demand for the emu products, from meat, leather, feather and oil to food, fashion and healthcare merchandise.

Marketing Push

"You are filling a void in our agricultural industry," said Cotton Ivy, the colorful Tennessee Commissioner of Agriculture. "Be patient. Establish guidelines that will take you through the years. If emus are going to be the success we think they are going to be, you've got to communicate."

The AEA leadership immediately responded to the challenge. It rolled out a vast array of ongoing programs to convince American ranchers and farmers that the emu is one of the fastest growing, most dynamic alternative agribusinesses in the nation; that commercial uses are being intensely studied and consumers products are emerging.

"Our primary mission is to organize, educate and promote; to increase our membership," said Bettye Odle, 47, of Flower Mound, TX (near Dallas). Odle, the newly elected president of the AEA (1994-95) and owner of the Outback Bird Company, declared, "We must continue work in research and product development and provide direction for a smooth transition to a commercial market."

The current communications campaign includes news releases, scripts and slides to 10,000 newspapers, 5,000 radio stations and 1,000 TV stations; 50,000 four-color brochures to educate legislators, regulators, agricultural extension agents, bankers and potential investors; 250,000 brochures a year to respond to public inquiries resulting from a billboard campaign being rolled out by the 25 state and regional emu associations.

Additionally, public service announcements, bumper stickers and a new logo were presented as part of the campaign nucleus: "Emu, A New Frontier in Ranching."

"This industry is real!" emphasized Pierce Allman, executive director of the 5,500-member Dallas-based AEA. "Ten thousand families are involved . . . and the new entrants are motivated not by greed but an opportunity to be on the ground floor of a new industry, as well as an ability to earn a good living."

Allman acknowledged the current "breeder phase" as the flocks are expanded to a viable level for annual harvest. Citing a recent AEA study, he noted that a high number of corporate drop-outs seeking an alternative lifestyle, early retirees and young families opting for different careers are joining traditional ranchers and farmers becoming breeders.

"This bird is 95% usable; very little waste," he said. "They are pen-raised, fed on commercially-produced ration feed at about $150 per bird annually and are environmentally compatible — padded feet, vegetation 'nippers' and little excrement." Observers have compared the industry to the turkey industry in its early phase when "a pair of breeding turkeys cost $2,000 in 1927. And look at the demand for products today!"

Emu Census Results

Dr. Cindy Ford, vice president and director of research for Service Strategies International of Dallas and former director of the Center for Statistical Consulting & Research at Southern Methodist University, shocked many ranchers with the preliminary findings of the study conducted by SMU under her leadership.

"There are an estimated quarter million birds of all ages owned by (AEA) members. That projects to about a half-million total U.S. birds," counting those raised by non-members. "I was just astounded by these numbers. I never knew the industry was this large so soon," said the statistical science educator.

The study, based on surveys mailed in June, indicates a 145% growth in the number of birds during the past 12 months, and means the number of U.S. emus has surpassed the number of captive emu in Australia, where it is indigenous and the national bird. Within the AEA alone, there are about 153,000 chicks aged 0-6 months; 57,000 birds aged 6-24 months and 48,000 adult emus.

"In 1996, we project 1.5 million emus owned by AEA members and nearly 3 million in the United States," Dr. Ford said. At that point, the industry will be positioned to transition to a commercial market.

Product Studies

Emu meat, a red meat similar to beef in taste and texture, is 97% fat free, low in calories and cholesterol and contains the preferred polyunsaturated fatty acids.

"Seventy percent of the fatty acids in emu oil are unsaturated," said Dr. Margaret C. Craig-Schmidt of Auburn University's Dept. of Nutrition & Food Science. The associate professor's previous research has focused on the effects of dietary fat as it impacts cardiovascular disease, cystic fibrosis and essential fatty acid requirements in infants.

Dr. Alexander Zemtsov of Texas Tech's Health Science Center, said volunteers in a "double blind" test preferred emu oil 10-to-one over mineral oil. He said the highly penetrating oil, now used by many professional sports teams in a pure form, shows great hope for future emu oil-based ointments.

Ongoing research also is studying emu oil's potential as a "transfer agent" for topical medicinal applications.

Doug Atkinson, trainer for the Dallas Mavericks, related numerous accounts of players satisfactorily using the oil to treat bruises, strains and stiffness. The oil also is used in cosmetics and lotions.

Zoo's News?

Two Pair of Emus

The Nashville visitors took a positive parting shot at their host city, whose new 135-acre zoo was noticeably missing a key member from its exhibit of ratites (flightless birds). The AEA arranged a "breeder loan" of two pair of young emus to join the ostriches, rheas and cassowaries among the 600 animals representing 160 species.

Rick Schwartz, Director of the Nashville Zoo, welcomed the "new American livestock," noting with irony that the U.S. industry began in the 1950s with zoo stock.

Beekeeping

Bob was also appointed to be a state apiarian inspector, which is basically a summer job of checking on colonies of bees for disease.

Although Bob tended his hives and offered a pollination service for years, he said, "I always had a job in town and fattened hogs."

Three years ago, Hughes retired and is concentrating more on the bee and candle-making business.

"This is a great business for someone who is retired and doesn't want to watch television all the time," Hughes said.

"I'm a niche marketer," he said of finding gift shops, stores, and market stands to sell his supplies.

The Hughes also demonstrate candle making at craft shops, fairs, and special events.

Rainbow Apiaries holds an open house each year, when candle making and beekeeping is demonstrated.

Hughes also will be teaching two different courses at the Garden Spot High School Adult Education Program. One is beekeeping and the other is candlemaking.

The beekeeping classes run every Tuesday for five weeks from Jan. 10. It's a fun hands-on course that will cover all aspects for the beginning beekeeper. The course will start with assembly equipment, selection of colony site, information about the bee season from spring through fall. Participants will learn to extract honey and the uses for honey, wax, and pollen. Tuition is $30.

Crafting with bees wax will be taught for five successive Thursdays beginning Jan. 12. Participants will learn to roll beeswax candles, poured and dipped taper candles, and use plastic, poly and ceramic molds to form beeswax ornaments. Tuition is $25.

Registration for the classes will be held at Garden Spot High School during daytime hours on January 3-5. Evening registration will be held in the lobby from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m.

The Hughes may be contacted at Rainbow Apiaries, 668 Turkey Hill Rd., East Earl, PA 17519-9665, (717) 445-6674.

4-H Capon Roundup

The Cashtown Lions Club hosted the Annual 4-H Capon Roundup with a record setting sale. The grand champion was exhibited by Chris Shetter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Shetter, Gettysburg. The 10-pound capon was purchased by Bernard V. Miller, Sr. The reserve champion capon was exhibited by first-year project member Kim Stevens of Abbotstown. Kim's 12-pound, 1-ounce capon was purchased by Douglas M. Miller, contractor, Pole Buildings, New Oxford. Kim is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rick Stevens.

Edward Miller, chairman for this year's show and sale, reported 11 Adams County 4-H'ers participated in the 4-H Capon Roundup sponsored by the Cashtown Lions Club, the Adams County Poultry Association, and 4-H Clubs of Adams County Inc. Twenty-two capons sold for $1091.18. The average price per pound was $4.77. Miller said that the profit received by these junior executives from this 4-H capon business is used as operation capital for next year's 4-H capon project and serves to help meet future educational expenses.

The members were judged on the Danish System by Herb Jordan, retired poultry specialist at Penn State. The capons were evaluated on conformation, freedom from pin feathers, cuts, bruises, packaging, and dressing procedures. Members receiving blue merit ribbons for exhibiting excellent quality capons were Laura Shetter, Tim Shetter, Dan Mummert, and Nate Mummert. Josh Ramsburg, Heather Stevens, and Langdon Ramsburg received red merit ribbons for exhibiting superior quality capons. Matt Winters and Christina Winters received white merit ribbons for exhibiting good quality capons.

Lloyd Spahr, Adams County Poultry Association president, presented the trophies to the champions. The Adams County Poultry Association purchased the trophies for roundup and purchased two capons to be donated to the Gettysburg Community Soup Kitchen.

More information on 4-H in Adams County may be obtained by contacting the Adams County Cooperative Extension Service, 1135 Chambersburg Rd., Gettysburg, PA 17325, or calling (717) 334-6271 or (717) 624-4525.

Junior Leadership Course

Bucks County 4-H, in cooperation with the Doylestown Toastmaster's Club, is offering the Junior Leadership Course to students 13 years of age and older.

Beginning February 6, the eight-week course will focus on skill development in public speaking, conducting meetings, and the basics of parliamentary procedure.

The course will be held at Neshaminy Manor Center from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Monday evenings. There is a fee of $8. All teens are welcome and it is not necessary to belong to a 4-H Club to participate in this course. There will be a celebration including parents at the end of the course.

To enroll in the course, call the Penn State Cooperative Extension office, (610) 345-3283. 4-H programs are available to youth age 8-19 years.

ing below the poverty line also are less likely than poor urban kids to receive welfare at all. Jensen and Eggebeen indicate that this gap in assistance is due only partly to higher rates of two-parent families and parental employment in rural areas.

The researchers say the high value placed on self-reliance by rural residents may make them reluctant to apply for welfare, even when they may qualify for benefits. The study also found that both urban and rural poor families rely more heavily on welfare now than in the 1970s or 1980s. Yet they receive less money from public assistance.

Jensen and Eggebeen found that the percentage of total family income from parental earnings declined steadily over the past two decades, due to declines in both average parental earnings (adjusted for inflation) and the percentage of poor parents with any earnings at all. At the same time, the percentage of poor children whose parents received public assistance income increased steadily.

"Basically, the picture that emerges is of poor children in families that are relying increasingly on welfare, and decreasingly on the parental paycheck," Jensen said. "Unfortunately, our study also shows that welfare does not appreciably reduce the severity of poverty among children, who are, after all, the innocent victims of poverty," he said.

"Policy makers need to be aware that both rural and urban children are relying more heavily on a welfare system that is doing little to relieve poverty," Jensen says.

Combines And Things On The Grow

LOIS SZYMANSKI
Maryland Correspondent

There's a new video out for kids that is going to turn some heads. The video, "Tractors, Combines and Things On The Grow" was produced by Cockeysville resident Patti Schindler. The first video in a series she plans to produce with her new company, "Just Our Size Videos", Mrs. Schindler's video shows how farms work, from seed to feed.

"Tractors, Combines and Things On The Grow" takes the viewer on an amazing journey, from the grocery store, into the field, to show just how our food is grown and produced. Kids will be amazed by the fast-growing corn scene that was provided by Media Resources Center at Iowa State University. Shot with time lapse photography, it shows how corn evolves over the course of its growing season. Large portions were filmed on a Lippy Brothers Farm, showing how a combine works, with views from the field, inside the cab of the combine and with incredible footage of the inside workings of a combine stripping corn from the cob. The video tape also shows kids how soy beans and green beans are picked and shipped. Crop transportation footage was provided by Archer-Daniels-Midland with shots of trucks dumping their wares at feed mills, grain elevators, trains and the ships that carry farm produced foods to other parts of the world. One scoop dumping grain into a ship is as big as a small house!

From the farm, to the factory, this video also makes a stop at a large factory bakery where close up shots show how wheat is ground into flour, then made into large rolls of dough, then into loaves of bread. The journey, which follows a farmer's produce through to the end product, is not just fascinating to kids. Patti Schindler says "A lot of adults who watch the film say, 'I didn't know that!' about parts of it!"

Mrs. Schindler lives on eight acres just outside of Baltimore. She says they own a few horses and lease a pony for her four-year-old son, Blake.

"Blake was the inspiration for the video," says this stay-at-home mom. "Having a child at home, I see how often kids sit down to watch a video. Blake loves tractors and big equipment," she says, "and there was just nothing out there. As farm areas are getting smaller over the years I feel it is important to show children where food really comes from," she adds. "But, the tractors and large equipment make the subject more interesting for kids!"

With support from her accountant husband, Bruce, Mrs. Schindler began making contacts. She found child narrators, Adam and Rachel Sincell through a consultant, Glenn Tolbert. She found cooperation from John Deere (who helped her with the technical terms and supplied footage), Giant Foods Bakery (where footage was shot) and especially Donald Lippy and his family on the Lippy Brothers Farms in Carroll and Baltimore counties, Maryland, where the farm scenes were recorded. Mrs. Schindler hired free-lance photographers and the filming began in early April 1994.

By November of 1994 the filming was complete. Mrs. Schindler says she worked under the supervision of The American Farm Bureau and The National Corn Growers Association. She consulted with Farm Safety 4 Just Kids throughout the filming to make sure the tape conformed to safety standards.

"I think we made all the right contacts," said Mrs. Schindler who says she did not allow children to be filmed on farm equipment or to do anything that might be construed as dangerous. "I wanted it to be done very professionally." When Maryland Ag in the Classrooms viewed the tape they promptly ordered 100 copies for use in the classrooms.

A. Vermont fulfillment company is handling wholesale, retail, and packaging and is distributing her video with the help of a 1-800 number.

Mrs. Schindler says they have already sold "hundreds" of copies of the video and she is pleased with how it is doing. "When I looked at a statement from Vermont with the recent sales figures, I was surprised," she says. "My whole goal was to educate city kids about farming," she says, "But more orders are from rural areas than metropolitan areas!"

"Our video is done entirely from a child's point of view," Mrs. Schindler says. But it is obvious to the viewer that the film, "Tractors, Combines and Things On The Grow" is not just for kids! To order the video, which is approximately 30 minutes in length, and retails at $19.95, interested persons or businesses may call 1-800-808-FARM.

Farm Show: Meet Friends, Garner Championships

ANDY ANDREWS

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) —

Farm Show is more than just a chance to win a championship. For the Bennecoff family, it's one of the premier social events of the year.

"During the regular fair run, you see your local friends," said Cheryl Bennecoff, who, with husband Todd and family, will bring 18 gilts to the breed show at the beginning of the event. "But when you go to the Farm Show, you see friends from further out in Pennsylvania that you don't see a lot. You get to sort of reunite with people you haven't seen in a while."

For many families attending the premier event of the season, the Farm Show provides a great place to meet people from all areas and walks of life.

For instance, Todd remembers the time when someone asked him if the ear tags on the hogs were stuck on or were the pigs born with them?

Those kinds of questions, from the thousands of visitors, give the family lots of chuckles. Cheryl suggested they simply post the answers to a lot of the common questions they get on a bulletin board for all to read.

Together with their children — Todd Jr., 7; Justine, 4; and Amy, 5 mos. — Todd and Cheryl operate a small farrow-to-finish operation with Todd's parents Terry and Carol near New Smithville. They manage about 130 acres and care for about 30 sows — about 80 percent Hampshires and the rest split between Berkshires and Poland Chinas.

When the hog price was still good, Todd said he would finish out about 500 hogs a year. But now, he raises mostly feeder pigs for custom pig roasting.

Todd said he prefers the Berkshire breed, even though, growing up as a hog farmer, his father managed Yorkshires, Hampshires, Berkshires, and Chester Whites. "We had a little bit of everything," said Todd.

Now, their breed of choice is the Hampshire, because "that's the most powerful breed," said Cheryl. "When you go out to these big shows, the Hampshire shows are the biggest."

The Bennecoff family, which also includes Todd's father, Terry, travel to a lot of type shows, sales, and state fair events to find the best genetics. Recently, Terry purchased a Hampshire boar from Colorado. The Bennecoffs have purchased gilts and boars from many type shows.

Also, during the year, they attend a lot of fairs. The fair season kicks off in a hectic way with the Allentown Fair in late August or early September.

And it kicks off in a big way, too — usually simultaneously, because at the time of Allentown

Editor's Note: This farm family like many others across Pennsylvania is making plans and preparing to show livestock at the Pennsylvania Farm Show to be held in Harrisburg next week. Look for show schedules and a commercial exhibitor list and show layout in Section A this week. Next week we will have our annual Farm Show Issue with expanded advertising and news story coverage of Pennsylvania agriculture's major event that runs from January 7 to 12 in the Farm Show Complex on North Cameron Street.

Justine Bennecoff closes a shelter door for her hogs.

Todd said he has spent time since he was a kid, at shows, talking to the breeders. "I knew a lot of the breeders and I'd always go see what they'd think of the pig. And they'd say, you got a pretty good one or you don't." He shows off a scrapbook of stories of his success through the years.

Fair, the Bennecoffs are exhibiting hogs at the Sullivan County Fair in Forksville and also the New York State Fair.

At the Allentown and Sullivan fairs, they take 60 hogs up to each. The New York State Fair—also at the same time of Sullivan and Allentown—was big for them last year, because they picked up champion of all breeds with a Hampshire gilt.

Following New York is the York Fair, of which they take about 48 animals. Bloomsburg, their biggest fair, includes about 88 head from the herd. Following Bloomsburg is the Keystone International Livestock Exposition, at which they take 48 head.

But of all the shows, "I always liked Farm Show the best," said Todd. "I always will. You can't beat that."

When he was 17, Todd won champion market hog during the youth competition at the Farm Show. Last year, the Bennecoffs won supreme champion overall gilt with a Hampshire.

Those marked the two finest years in Todd's Farm Show memory. He's been going to the show for almost 30 years—since he was a baby. Todd has been going to Farm Show with his own family for the past seven years.

Todd said that he was "shocked" when he won grand champion overall at last year's Farm Show. He was impressed with the Hampshire gilt. "I knew she was good, because she was supreme at the New York State Fair, too. When two judges pick the same gilt, then you got a good one."

Todd said he has spent time since he was a kid, at shows, talking to the breeders.

"I knew a lot of the breeders and I'd always go see what they'd think of the pig. And they'd say, you got a pretty good one or you don't."

Todd said, "You need to look at the breeds themselves. If you think there are real good individuals of that breed that can help improve it, that's what you got to do. If you have an individual of that breed that's outstanding, you should use that individual."

The Bennecoffs enjoy traveling, because that provides a vacation away from the headaches and responsibilities of being hog farmers.

"When you're at home, you have to feed at home and you have to go up there and be back at night," said Cheryl.

In 1992, the Bennecoffs traveled to the Indiana State Fair with four Poland China gilts and one Berkshire boar. The Berkshire boar won reserve grand champion overall boar.

Todd's parents, Terry and Carol, also traveled "on vacation" to the World Pork Expo in Indianapolis, Ind. during the summer to look for genetics to bring back to the herd.

The Poland Chinas are easier hogs to drive in the show ring, according to Cheryl. The Hampshires are often more difficult, she said, because when they see the gate they entered from, they want to go back.

Of all the fairs they attended, the Bennecoffs remember some that stand out as most challenging. One year, Cheryl had to endure the constant rain at the York Fair. For Todd, Bloomsburg was difficult, because he had a lot of hogs and it rained up there "all the time."

Todd believes it is becoming harder and harder for the small producer to survive. He uses the winning trophies to help market his hogs, but, he said, these days

"it's starting to come down to figures."

"You got to have figures. The commercial guys are getting bigger, the ones that are still in it, and they have figures on paper, including rate of gain, daily gain, loin-eyes, backfat."

What frightens him the most is that there is a move to "get rid of all the little guys."

"Who's going to buy anything when there is one big breeder who will supply all the gilts and the boars and everything?" he said.

"If all the pigs come from the same place, whose pig is better?"

Todd said the move to "corporate farming" will hurt the fairs and Farm Show, too.

"Soon, there won't be any fairs," said Cheryl. "There won't be anyone to show. Because nobody will be able to stand up and have any pigs anymore and afford it."

MOLINE, Ill. — Three new books from John Deere provide owners and managers of farms and ranches with the latest management information on machinery replacement, livestock production, and farm and ranch safety.

The books, entitled "Machinery Replacement Strategies," "Managing Livestock Production," and "Farm And Ranch Safety Management" are published by Deere & Company's Service Publications Department.

Farm Broadcaster Receives Top Honor

CALLICOON, N.Y. — Ed Slusarczyk of Remsen was named the recipient of New York Farm Bureau's Distinguished Service to Agriculture in the Empire State Award. The Farm Bureau's top honor was given out, at the annual convention of the 25,000-member New York Farm Bureau.

According to New York Farm Bureau President Charles E. Wille, "Ed Slusarczyk has spent a lifetime informing farmers and the general public across the Northeast about agriculture. He is highly deserving of our Distinguished Service to Agriculture Award, New York Farm Bureau's most prestigious honor."

Born on a dairy farm in Prospect, N.Y. (Oneida County), Slusarczyk served in the Army during World War II and, when he returned home, was graduated from Cornell University. He started his career in farm broadcasting at WIBX Radio in Utica in 1949. In 1958, he built WADR Radio in Remsen which he operated for 10 years before returning to WIBX Radio.

The 88-page machinery-replacement book provides a "real world" comparative-cost analysis of machinery replacement alternatives, including repairing, trading, renting, leasing, and using a custom operator.

The livestock production book covers the beef, hog, and sheep segments of the livestock industry. The 272-page text, with over 500 illustrations, examines production methods, processing and distribution, marketing strategies, risk management, and cost reduction issues.

Agway Employee Gains Certification

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Jerry Zubey, a dairy nutrition specialist for Agway Inc., recently attained membership in the American Registry of Professional Animal Scientists (ARPAS).

Zubey, who has been with the firm 13 years, met the requisite educational and experience qualifications and successfully completed a written competency examination for acceptance to ARPAS.

Zubey and his wife, Helene, are residents of Tamaqua. They have two children. He graduated from Pennsylvania State University with a bachelors in animal science. SHAWNEE MISSION, Kan. — Using a unique Zoospore screening technique, researchers at America's Alfalfa have developed three new varieties—the first to earn the +Z™ designation for extremely high levels of seedling resistance to phytophthora and aphanomyces.

Breakthrough research, plant breeding, and top germplasm have produced the new +Z varieties; Avalanche+Z, Innovator+Z and Total+Z; to give growers thick and healthy stands, strong winterhardiness, long stand life and high yield potential.

All three varieties have exceptionally high levels of seedling resistance to the most common diseases that are harmful to alfalfa stands and yield, phytophthora and aphanomyces. Strong resistance to these and other diseases give +Z varieties superior early vigor and quick regrowth due to optimum plant health. Grower and university results are proving the advantages of these varieties.

• Avalanche+Z (fall dormancy rating: 2.2) is a superior winter-hardy variety that yields like a full season variety. In northern university trials, Avalanche appeared at rating: 3.0) is a high-quality forage variety that was NIRS selected to deliver high stem protein and total protein, while maintaining high yields and a long stand life. It features high resistance to four major alfalfa diseases, +Z seedling resistance to phytophthora and aphanomyces and excellent winter survival. Innovator+Z is highly digestible to deliver more feed value per ton, yielding more beef and milk per day.

• Total+Z (fall dormancy rating: 3.4) is the first multileaf variety available with high levels of seedling resistance to phytophthora and aphanomyces. Total+Z has shown better winterhardiness and stand persistence than competitive multileaf varieties, and it has been a top performer in university yield trials. It features high resistance to five major alfalfa diseases, +Z seedling resistance to phytophthora and aphanomyces, and resistance to pea aphids and leafhopper yellowing.

Hines To Serve As Association President

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Ed Hines, of Hines Equipment (a division of Cresson Feed Mill, Inc.), will serve as president of the Farm & Power Equipment Dealers Association.

Ed and his brother, Gene Hines, own and operate Hines Equipment. The corporation includes three stores, a feed mill, and two full-line equipment stores.

The business was started by his grandfather in 1919 as a feed, farm supply, and implement store. Along with four sons, he operated it into the 1940s when he retired and the three sons continued the family business.

In 1960 the business was incorporated with Ed's dad and uncle. Then, in 1975, Ed and Gene Hines bought the uncle's shares and continued the business with their father until his death in 1981. Ed Hines serves as president of the corporation. Both Ed and Gene have two sons that take an active part in the day-to-day operation of the business.

Ed grew up in the business working summers. He graduated from Altoona Catholic High School and then went to Penn State University for a two-year-farm equipment sales and service course. After graduation, he went back to the family business where he started to expand the equipment part of the business. In 1965, a new store outside of town was built for the equipment division now handling agriculture, industrial, and outdoor power equipment. The major lines they sell include Case IH, Cub Cadet, Gehl, Kubota, Wopds and New Idea.

Hines has served on the board of directors and major committees and offices of the Penn-Jersey Farm & Power Equipment Dealers Association since December 1988.

Pork Producers Launch Stewardship Program

DES MOINES, Iowa — The National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) has launched an Environmental Stewards Program to recognize pork producers who are demonstrating positive contributions to their local environment.

"The National Pork Producers Council is very excited about this opportunity to showcase pork producers with exceptional, long-term environmental vision," said Jerry King, a pork producer from Victoria, Ill., and chairman of NPPC's Environmental Committee.

"This is another way we can share environmental information among pork producers so they can continue raising hogs in harmony with the environment," said King.

The program, co-sponsored by National Hog Farmer magazine and Pfizer Animal Health, will also generate public awareness of successful environmental management techniques being used in today's pork production.

All pork producers are eligible to apply or be nominated for this program. Applications will be evaluated in five areas: manure management, financial management, aesthetics and neighbor relations, wildlife management, and innovation. Five national stewards will be named annually, one from each of the designated regions in the United States. Stewards will receive an expense-paid trip to Washington, D.C., $1,000, and will be featured in National Hog Farmer magazine.

For more information on the program, write to Environmental Stewards, National Pork Producers Council, P.O. Box 10383, Des Moines, IA 50306, 800-456-7675.

Compost Application Can Supply Fertility For Consecutive Crops

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Whether you're a backyard gardener or a commercial vegetable grower, adding compost to your soil can provide fertility over several consecutive years, according to researchers in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Preliminary results from an ongoing field study headed by Dr. Kenneth Steffen, assistant professor of vegetable crop physiology, show that an initial large-scale application of compost can support a succession of four different vegetable crops over three years without any additional fertilizer.

"Yields from plots amended with compost were consistently greater than or comparable to those in unamended and conventionally fertilized plots," Steffen said. "Our data suggest that although the initial cost of compost can be higher than that of conventional fertilizer, it may be cost effective in the long run."

In 1990, the first year of the study, the researchers incorporated about 28 dry tons per acre of spent mushroom compost and 25 dry tons per acre of well-rotted manure into the soil of selected plots. Other plots received no soil amendments except for recommended levels of conventional fertilizer.

"Total marketable yield of tomatoes that year was 25 percent greater, and yield of U.S. number-1 grade tomatoes was 67 percent greater in the compost-amended plots," Steffen said.

"In the second year, we no-tilled three varieties of sweet corn into the same plots," he said. "The unamended plots received the recommended nitrogen, while those amended with organic matter received no further nutrients. Depending on the maturity of the cultivar, our marketable sweet corn ear production was 15 to 76 percent greater in the plots amended with organic matter."

In the third year, following moldboard plowing, the researchers planted snap beans, followed later in the season by broccoli and cabbage. Unamended plots received recommended levels of fertilizer while those previously amended with organic matter received no further additions.

"Snap bean yields were comparable in both soil treatments," Steffen said. "Broccoli heads had greater average weights and cabbage was more mature at harvest in the plots with added organic matter."

In addition to studying yields, the researchers are looking at the effects of compost on soil nitrate loss through leaching, as well as mineral salt levels in composted soil.

"Evidence from other studies suggests that a large addition of composted organic matter does not increase soil nitrate losses above conventional fertilization practices," said Dr. Michael Dann, research and outreach coordinator for the project. "We're looking to verify those findings in our research plots."

"Repeated additions of composts may also increase soil salinity levels," Dann adds. "This could lead to nutrient deficiencies and reduced yields in crops sensitive to high salt conditions."

Deere Honors Dealers At Meeting

EPHRATA, (Lancaster Co.) — John Deere dealers and dealer employees received plaques and tractor pro jackets for outstanding accomplishments in both sales and aftermarket sales at the Dec. meeting held at Yoder's restaurant in New Holland.

The sales contest was held during the past year. Deere & Co. (John Deere Company) recorded its largest sales growth in its history in 1994.

Plaque winners for outstanding growth in sales were Enfield Equipment, Inc. of Whiteford, Md. & Oxford, Pa. for agricultural sales and aftermarket sales (parts and service). Landis Bros. Inc. of Lancaster and Lebanon received the Lawn and Grounds Care Sales Award.

Twenty-four employees of six dealerships on sales territory 41 received tractor pro jackets for exceeding the contest criteria in both sales and aftermarket sales.

The John Deere sales team of Jerry Thomas and Geff Burris held the program and announced the criteria for the 1995 sales contest. John Cook from the Columbus, Ohio Dealer Assistance Center was on hand to cover new developments within the order processing and computer functions at the company and dealerships.

Sales Territory 41 includes John Deere agriculture and lawn and grounds care dealerships located in Adamstown, Allentown, Easton, Lancaster, Lebanon, Lynnport, New Holland, Oley, Oxford and West Chester, Pa.,

Council: Allegations Not Based On Fact

WASHINGTON, D.C., — "The United States is not taking markets away from the Australians. We are using GATT-legal export programs to expand our marketing efforts," said Kenneth Hobbie, president and CEO of the U.S. Feed Grains Council. "We cannot let the Australians make misleading statements."

Hobbie was speaking in response to allegations by the Australian Grains Council that the recent announcement of Export Enhancement Program initiatives for U.S. barley interfere in "traditional Australian markets."

China and South Korea were included in the export enhancement package announcement that totaled 2.6 million metric tons and included 24 countries.

"China and Korea are new opportunities for U.S. barley," said Hobbie. "Since Korea banned all feed barley imports until late this summer, the market cannot be a traditional Australian market."

"China uses imported barley in beer production. China has the fastest growing beer and malting industry in the world and already is the world's largest importer of malting barley representing one third to one-half of the world trade. You can't tell me that the 75,000 metric ton EEP initiative for China is going to come directly in competition with Australian barley. There is enough demand growth there for the United States and Australia to compete in this market, especially when beer production is growing at 15 percent per year and consumer demand is growing 20 to 25 percent per year.

"We can understand the Australian concern about the severe drought and reduced crops this year. It was just last year that floods cut U.S. production. But when the United States had short supply the Australians had a large market share and still complained. Our understanding is that Australia will still export 1 million metric tons of barley. 75,000 metric tons is a relatively small presence."

"Everyone needs to keep in mind that the choice of supplier is still up to the customer. The U.S. government can make EEP available, but the purchaser must go through commercial channels. These EEP announcements enable U.S. exporters to supply the market at commercial prices."

WINTER VENTILATION

Dr. William D. Weaver, Jr.
Professor And Head
Department Of Poultry Science

It is critical that the incoming air jet associated with a negative pressure ventilation system be directed across the ceiling and toward the center of the room during the colder periods of the year. When this occurs, the colder, and consequently heavier, outside air is warmed prior to reaching bird level.

Further, since the primary purpose of ventilating during the winter months is to remove moisture from the litter to prevent the production of harmful gases (ammonia, etc.), warming of the air is necessary to reduce its relative humidity (RH). The "rule of thumb" is that the moisture-holding capacity of air doubles for each 20 degree F. increase in temperature.

For example, when outside air at a temperature of 30 F. and 100 percent RH is brought into the poultry house and allowed to warm up to 70 F., its RH will decrease to 25 percent.

Now, what is the significance of "throw" in the process? First, the definition of throw would be in order. Simply stated, throw is the distance an air jet will travel before its maximum velocity decreases to 50 feet per minute or, by definition, becomes still air. Now, when remembering the earlier discussion about desiring the air jet to travel across the ceiling and toward the center of the room, it becomes important to understand some characteristics of throw.

The equation for throw is $X = K \times V_i \times b \text{ over } V_x$ where:

X = throw (feet)
 K (constant) = 10
 V_i = velocity of air at the inlet (feet/minute)
 b = width of the inlet (feet)
 V_x = velocity of air "x" feet from the inlet, or 50 feet/minute.

Therefore, when studying the equation, it can be seen that two factors increase the throw, that is, increase the distance the air will travel into the room before it becomes still, uncontrollable air.

The first factor is the velocity of the incoming air, which is normally expressed as static or negative pressure. Generally, a pressure of .10" water column will produce an average inlet velocity of 800 to 900 feet per minute. The second factor that influences throw is the width of the inlet opening. Therefore, in order to increase the width of the opening without affecting the overall area of the opening, its length must be reduced.

That is the phenomenon which supports the use of intermittent air inlets located at the eaves on both sidewalls in broiler and turkey houses today.

Experience shows that ventilation systems should be operated at a static pressure of between .07" and .10" static pressure during the colder months, with the air inlets opened a minimum of one inch. Under these conditions, the incoming air jet will travel to the center of the house before it dissipates.

PLAN NOW FOR 1995!

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

When Planning Your Forage Programs, Remember That Your Main Objective Is To Store The Plant And Remove It From Storage In As Good Condition As Possible. The Upright Silo Has Never Been Equalled In Its Ability To Do This...

On Most Dairy Farms, Forage Quality Is The Single Most Important Factor Relating To Profit...

Poured Concrete Silos Consistently Out-Perform All Other Methods Of Storing And Preserving The Total Digestible Nutrients In Forage Crops...

"Nobody Protects Forage Quality Like We Do..Nobody!"

BARN CLEANERS

All-forged Hook-Link® chain... available on Super 300 and Super 500 barn cleaners

Extra thick steel at all wear points

IMPORTANT: Look for the "parting line" on any barn cleaner chain you buy. It shows where excess metal has been trimmed off. It is your assurance that the link was totally forged, not just punched out of a flat steel bar with grain flow in one direction only. You want a totally-forged link because forging changes the grain on the steel, causing it to curve in unbroken flow lines around the contours of the link, giving the link greater strength to serve you longer.

KELDERMAN AIR RIDE

Adding a Kelderman Air Ride Conversion system to your present suspension will result in a two stage suspension system. This is not to be confused with adding an Air bag mounted above the axle. Allows adding extra spring leaves to increase load rating and still maintain Air-Ride comfort.

The bolt on basic package utilizes an air stem mounted in a convenient location to add or remove air from the system.

Optional 12 volt compressor allows changing air pressure setting on the go.

Currently available for front and rear suspension in Dodge Series 250 & 350 trucks. Available soon for Dodge Dakota models.

Also available for some Ford, Chevy, and GMC truck models. Special orders available for most motor homes. This option will smooth out the ride on those rough-road fishing/camping trips

Agriculture Moves on EBY Bodies

M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- LIVESTOCK BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of heights and widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24'; landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer custom options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business- building bodies to haul it is ours.

Cows, Numbers And Identification

LARRY W. SPECHT
Professor of Dairy Science

Currently there are about 9.6 million dairy cows in the U.S. How many of them contribute to the genetic improvement of our national dairy herd? DHIA records show that about 4.8 million cows are on a production testing program but only 3.5 million are in programs that will qualify their records to be utilized by breed and AI sponsored progeny test programs.

Records used by the USDA-AIPL cow and sire evaluation programs must be sire identified. Roughly 65 percent of the production records have sire information. This brings the number of usable records down to 2.3 million. A large majority of the cows on test (possibly 90%) are Holsteins. Ninety percent of 2.3 million equals 2 million Holsteins with useable production data. With such a large number of animals it only takes a portion of them to run an adequate young sire testing program. Twenty percent of the cows bred to progeny test bulls will provide good genetic programs for the Holstein breed. This would require that 400,000 cows be bred to young bulls. If each young sire breeds 500 cows we expect 50 to 60 tested and identified daughters, enough to get a good idea as to the genetic merit of the sire. This plan would enable us to test about 800 sires per year through organized sampling programs. Actually, the U.S. breeding industry is currently testing almost twice that number each year. Similar procedures for the other breeds would allow the testing of about 50 Jersey males, and from 10 to 12 bulls for the Guernsey, Ayrshire, and Brown Swiss breeds. Such figures are reasonably close to what the breed sponsored groups and A.I. units are presently doing. These numbers do not include bulls under test by individuals and private breeder groups.

We can conclude that 400 to 450 thousand tested cows will provide the daughter information needed to carry out the progeny test plan for the dairy breeds under today's circumstances. The production and physical traits of the daughters will tell us which sires are the best and should be used to produce the next generation of dairy cattle.

There is another group of females that is of even greater importance. It's the animals needed as dams of the next generation of bulls. The primary requirements in a bull dam are (1) in top 1 to 3 percent of the breed for her genetic value and (2) a reasonable classification score (82-85 points for young cows). Currently, registration in the breed herdbook is almost always a requirement.

There are about 800,000 registered Holsteins on the DHIR, DHI and AM/PM test plans. The top 1 percent of the breed are designated as "Elite" cows. Lists of the 8,000 plus animals are made available to breeders and AI units. Inquiries are made to the owners of the "Elite" cows asking if the animal(s) are (1) alive and reproductively sound, (2) have a reasonable classification score and (3) would be available for a contract mating to a top sire. The intent of the contract is to produce one or more sons by a specific sire mutually agreeable to the owner of the cow and the breeding unit. In some cases herdowners may get a number of inquiries on a single animal. It is estimated that about half of the 8,000 elite animals will meet the above qualifications. Since the industry follows the same routine every six months, many of the current animals were previously on the elite list. About 1,000 new animals appear each time and there is intense competition within the breeding industry to contract—mate the new ones.

Not every female that is contracted will produce a healthy male calf even with the extensive use of the embryo transfer technique. It is estimated that 75 to 80 percent of all contract cows undergo the embryo transfer procedure. For every 100 cows that are plan mated there will likely be 70-75 bulls born. Some death loss occurs and about 20 percent of the young bulls fail to pass the standard health tests required by all breeding units. Since such losses must

District Directors' Meetings Planned

The district meetings for local DHIA directors are planned for January and February, 1995. There are meetings scheduled around the state, corresponding to the 18 director districts. These meetings are held every year primarily for directors of local DHIA committees/boards. It is an opportunity for directors and management to get together for discussion of issues and developments affecting DHIA members statewide. Election of directors to the State Board is also done at the meetings. Anyone interested in attending the meeting in their district may contact their county committee or local board. The meeting will begin at 9:30 A.M. and end after lunch.

Notes From the Pa. DHIA Board Minutes

DAVE SLUSSER
General Manager

This year has been a very active and challenging year for the PA DHIA Board of Directors. The year started out with the hiring of a new General Manager, Dave Slusser, at the January 4th Board Meeting. Many changes were made by the Board and Management during the year to make the Cooperative more efficient and competitive for the times. The following is a brief summary of actions taken by the Board, and the management decisions announced at Board Meetings.

Feb. 17 - A lawsuit was filed against PA DHIA as well as Northeast, Vermont, Ohio and National. DHIA's The suit concerned anti-trust activities conducted jointly and individually against a private dairy records provider by the above named associates. PA filed a motion to dismiss the charges and prospects so far look very good for favorable actions in court toward PA DHIA.

Mergers were approved by the Board for Erie, and Susquehanna counties, and a conditional merger was approved for Bradford County.

April 26, 27 - The Board instructed management to complete a program necessary to track accounts receivable, and billing, and give the project top priority.

Management was to develop a more uniform system of billing the membership for the next budget.

A conditional merger was approved for Chester County.

The 1995 Annual Meeting date was set for March 10, 1995 in State college. In order to cut expenses, a one day annual meeting is planned starting with an Awards breakfast, followed by the business meeting. The meeting is set for the afternoon, and will not be a banquet.

Dixie Burris was named Laboratory Manager as well as Director of Member Services. Management announced the closing of the downtown office, and the conversion of the Lab employees from University employees to PA DHIA employees.

The Board endorsed the Resolution posted by the membership at the State Annual Meeting to change the feeding program to be more compatible with modern feeding systems on the farm.

Westfalia's Dairy Plan will be purchased from the Technicians Lap Top and marketed by PA DHIA.

New Officers elected by the Board are as follows:

President - Frank Orner

Vice-President - William Jackson

Secretary - Lane Sollenberger

Treasurer - Norman Hershey

Board representative on the Employee Retirement Fund - Neal McCulloch

Jun. 28, 29 - A marketing seminar was conducted for Senior Technicians, Regional Managers, and State Staff.

44 out of State Herds transferred to PA DHIA, and 9 Herds transferred out of State.

Sept. 29, 30 - Ted Brown was introduced to the Board as new Director of Finances and Personnel.

Features Of The Pennsylvania DHIA Program

When it comes to dairying, information is power. Pennsylvania DHIA recently announced a cooperative awareness with Westfalia that offers the power of on-farm computing to DHIA members by using Dairy plan in two different ways, either by daily use on the farm or by monthly use by the DHIA technician.

Dairy Use on the Farm

DHIA is now recognized Dairy Plan dealer for DHIA members. This means that DHIA members can purchase the Dairy plan software directly from DHIA, and can receive data and program support from the DHIA staff. With Dairy Plan you'll unleash the power to track:

General cow records	Vet check
Heat report	Pregnancy reports
Sire reports	Vaccinate
Vet reports	Heifer medication
Herd breeding reports	Cull lists
Semen inventory	Lifetime milk
Dry cows	Dairy/weekly worksheets and much more!

Right now you can use Dairy Plan on your farm without cost or obligation with Westfalia's FREE demo disks that contain all of Dairy Plan's management applications. You can start out with an empty cow file or you can order an extra start-up disk from PA DHIA that will dump your DHIA records into Dairy Plan. This special demo is programmed to run for a full 75 days. During that time you can enter data and use it to track milk weights, vet actions, lactation records and much, much more. Best of all, you can immediately use this information to make better management decisions. All the data you've entered will be saved on the disk, and after the 75 days you can continue working with your dairy plan management program by investing in the software for just $299.

One area where Dairy Plan outshines many other dairy software packages is in its graphs. You can not only produce the classic lactation graphs for each cow, but also graph the whole herd or groups of cows within the herd. Unique reproductive graphs show trends in breeding efficiencies and in freshening cycles.

On-farm computing with Dairy plan is not intended as a replacement for DHIA testing, but as a supplement—a simple, easy way to track herd management data between DHIA tests. Data on events (freshenings, breedings, vet check results) is recorded on a regular basis by the farmer and can be transferred to the technician's PC on test day to save time. Milk weights are still recorded by the technician and milk samples are taken for component analysis. The test day data can be immediately transferred back to the farm PC to record milk weights. A single milk weight can be A/P factored to project the daily milk total. After the lab tests are complete, the dairy can add in component results from a disk mailed back with the paper reports or by a data transfer via modem.

To find out more about getting your own copy of Dairy plan, check with your DHIA technician, regional manager or call the DHIA office.

Monthly Use by the DHIA technician

For those dairymen not ready to do their own computing, many DHIA technicians now have the Dairy Plan program on their laptop computers and can generate reports for dairymen on test day. Data collected for DHIA testing is used to update Dairy Plan files on the technician's PC. Then the technician has the full power of Dairy Plan at his fingertips to produce management reports immediately after testing. The most popular reports include:

Cows by Sorted by Test Day Milk
Vet Checklist

To Do Lists: Preg Check, Dry Off, Due to Calve, etc.

A recent enhancement to the regular paper DHIA reproductive reports has been the ability for the dairyman to specify Voluntary Wait period and Days to Preg Check. Dairy Plan goes this one better. The technician and dairyman can use Dairy Plan to customize reproductive reports even farther, by adjusting such management factors as Dry Days, adding checks live a prebreeding Check, and adding other events that need to occur during the course of a lactation.

For more information on test day use of Dairy plan, check with your DHIA Technician, regional manager or call the DHIA office.

Pennsylvania DHIA is using the power of Dairy Plan to provide on-farm computing to members.

Annual Meeting March 10

Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association seventh annual meeting of the corporation set for March 10, 1995. This year's meeting will be a one day meeting held at the Days Inn Penn State, State College, Pa. The Herd Management Awards winners will be recognized at an Awards Banquet.

All Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association members are invited to attend. The program allows for opportunities to learn more about the association, a chance for the association to understand members needs and concerns, and a chance to recognize the past years accomplishments and the coming year's goals.

This year PA DHIA will have a one day annual meeting. A spouse's program will also be offered this year. Plan now to attend. Your registration will be sent in with your reports.

Cows, Numbers And Identification

be taken into account we probably have 2,500-3,000 elite cows mated each year. In the final analysis we come down to several thousand cows out of a total population of close to ten million that provide the breeding males of the next generation for a major part of the U.S. breeding industry.

It's not surprising that people get upset with the DHIA testing program when their cow(s) fail to make the elite list because of missing or inaccurate identification. Errors can take many forms such as:

- *No sire numbers, at all—blank
- *Incorrect sire (or dam) registration number
- *Incorrect cow registration number
- *Eartag, barn name, or stud code reported instead of registration number
- *Missing breed code on cow, sire and/or dam
- *Missing "04" code if animal or her parents are Canadian

There are also problems with the daughters of a sire if they are misidentified. Such animals "ID" can be corrected but not usually in time to keep them in the "first fifty" on the USDA daughter list. Making that list can mean $25 to $40 for the herdowner for each milking heifer that qualifies. Some herds use only progeny test sires for breeding and plan on substantially reducing their breeding bill by qualifying a high percentage of their first lactation cows for the monetary incentives offered for the early data on daughters of progeny test sires. Errors in identification cost these herdowners money.

A large percentage of the errors in production and identification on DHIA reports are never seen or are not important enough to prompt the herdowner to ask for a correction. It's the other ten percent, "the high dollar errors", that puts DHIA

A's reputation on the line and causes extra work for everyone concerned when corrections have to be made. Even when the 16 corrections are made, it may take several months to clear the correction process and can cause the herdowner to complain that the delay

Awards At Summer Conference

A number of awards were given at the Summer Conference this year. They include retirement awards to Tom Fox of Clinton County; Robert Keppley of Berks County; William Meyers, Somerset County; Galen Kenepp, Mifflin County and Nellie Jones, Mercer County. Fox was recognized for more than 57 years of service to the organization.

The Superior Technician Award went to Raymond Yaggie of Berks County; and the Putnam Award went to James Benfield, Montgomery County (full time); and Connie Brumbaugh, Blair County (part time).

Distinguished Service Awards were given to Anne Brooks of Center County, Region 1; Mike Holbay of Somerset County, Region 2; Scott Williams, Susquehanna County, Region 3; and George Cashell, Region 4.

R. Walter Stydinger received the Carl B. Hollinger Memorial Award; and Lonnie Will Swanger, Cumberland County was named Rookie of the Year.

Plaques of appreciation went to David Shenk, Region 4 manager, 14 years; Diane McIlwain, Region 3 manager, 14 years; Larry Hay, Region 2 manager, 8 years; Dean Aden, Region 1 manager, 4 years; and David Bigelow, training coordinator, 10 years.

Agricultural Records Information

ARIS, the Agricultural Records Information Service, is a computer access system provided by the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association. This service is available to dairymen, veterinarians, feed consultants and other agribusiness consultants who have been authorized to have access to DHIA records via personal computer. These records are stored in a mainframe computer at the DHIA Service Center at University Park. ARIS is an on-line system, which means users must dial through a modem and connect to the mainframe computer to access their records immediately after your herd processes. This allows you to download the data to your pc. You can generate your own custom reports and inquiries to get the analysis best suited to your needs. A designated toll free number and also a help line for free telephone consultation with PA DHIA's trained DRPC professionals. The data is stored in a raw form which allows you to manipulate it to produce reports of our own. This data can be downloaded to be used in a spreadsheet to create graphs, etc. ARIS is designed to be used effectively as a management tool to improve herd performance.

To access the ARIS system, you must have a computer, modem and a useable phone line (a party line is usually unacceptable). The computer must be IBM compatible with at least 256 K memory. The modem must be Hayes or Hayes compatible, with 1200 or 2400 baud rates. Because the difference in price is slight and the line speed is twice as fast, 2400 baud is recommended. A hard disk is not necessary but is also recommended.

If you are interested in a workshop to learn more about ARIS or as a user would like to receive more training you may want to call Pat at DHIA 1-800-344-8378 or your county extension office to get a workshop scheduled.

About Stall Comfort

Spend some time watching cows rise in your stalls. See if some part of the stall prevents the normal lunge. This can be a wall or partition. Also look for "rub" marks where animals have repeatedly rubbed portions of stall structure in their efforts to rise. Neck rails poorly positioned can interfere with rising.

Installing brisket boards to keep animals back, opening up fronts of stalls, or using dividers which allow cows to put their heads to one side are all means to allow the normal lunging motion to take place.

This article can not begin to cover all the specific factors which go into stall comfort. If you do not routinely see 70 percent or more of your cows lying in stalls during quiet times of the day, then you can be sure that something is not right. Remember, if they were in a clean pasture they would all lie down. We want our stalls to duplicate that clean pasture as much as possible.

The budget was presented to the Board containing a uniform method of fees to our members. The budget was a result of a complete cost analysis study done.

Dairy Plan was installed on 12 Technicians Lap Tops.

Programming continues on the association's accounting programs to track finances and sales. BST can be reported back to the members if they report it.

cost him money because of lost sales. Errors are a part of life—even more so for those who work with a lot of numbers. Errors will happen! DHIA technicians need to be extra careful when working with herds that have registered cattle and the potential to sell breeding stock. The genetic future of the dairy industry rides on accurate Director and Manager School conducted by Penn State Cooperative Education.

rate information, that in large part is supplied by the DHIA program.

The best advice one can give to those who transmit data from the dairy herd to the DHIA processing center and ultimately to the USDA-AIPL's genetic evaluation system is to get it right the first time! It's the best way the DHIA program has of keeping the herdowner satisfied.

The Board reviews the financial reports at every meeting, and receives a management report from each of the department heads and the General Manager.

Soybean Association Sets Meeting

SALISBURY, Md. — The Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association is almost 25 years old.

The charter, binding four states together as a regional affiliate of the American Soybean Association, was signed on March 24, 1970.

Although about two months ahead of the silver anniversary date, members of the association will mark the event at their annual meeting Jan. 12 at the Sheraton Inn Conference Center in Dover, Del.

The meeting will be held in conjunction with the Delmarva Corn/Soybean and Vegetable Conference slated for Jan. 12 and

The MASA meeting will convene at 3:30 p.m., shortly after the adjournment of the regular corn and soybean conference program, and will include a brief special anniversary observance.

The guest speaker will be John Baize, formerly director of the Washington office of the American Soybean Association and now international trade consultant to the National Oilseed Processors' Association.

The association joins soybean producers, researchers and others in the industry from Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

It was founded to promote the production and use of soybeans and soybean products.

Headquartered now in an office in Salisbury, Md., under the direction of Jerry Kennedy, MASA's first office was on the College Park campus of the University of Maryland, and its "resident agent" was the late Joe Newcomer, a University of Maryland extension agronomist.

The list of members of the association's first board of directors and the signers of the articles of incorporation reads like a "who's who" of Mid-Atlantic agriculture.

In addition to Newcomer, the first directors were Edward R. Ralph of Georgetown, Del.; Olin Gooden of Woodside, Del.; Kenneth R. Hostetter of Hanover, Pa.; James R. Justin of Rutgers University; and Edward B. Edelen of Bryantown, Md.

Other signators of the incorporation papers were Edward L. Wisk of Georgetown, Del.; Francis J. Webb of Dover, Del.; J. D. Phillips of Townsends Inc. in Millsboro, Del.; E. Frank Connolly of Easton Md.; Alfred W. Frosch of Hurlock, Md.; Dale Reagan of Federalsburg, Md.; Robert McClain of A.W. Perdue & Son Inc. of Salisbury, Md.; Wayne Shaff of Salisbury, Md.; Charles A. Bruce of Princess Anne, Md.; Edward J. Allen of Prince Frederick, Md.; Hobart Nicholson of Snow Hill, Md.; Ralph Adkins of Snow Hill, Md.; and Roscoe Brown Jr. of Easton, Md.

Get Your Table Auger Repaired For Your Combine Replace Complete Section. Same As New. All Makes And Models. Why Buy New, Get Your Auger Repaired SAVE!!!

The high quality of corn forage produced by the JAGUAR is derived from the CLAAS corn cracker. Two saw toothed rollers run at different speeds with 20% difference open up virtually every kernel and this means good quality silage which is easily digested. This makes for highest energy transfer for higher milk and meat yields.

The rollers are subject to wear and tear, so the CLAAS corn cracker features removeable outer sleeves. The shafts, drive pulley and bearings are all reused, thus reducing maintenance costs. Foreign bodies pass through thanks to a spring loaded mechanism.

CLAAS

Every grain opened up

Leveling your hills.

The optional Hillside Cleaning System automatically swings the top sieve sideways, against the slope of the hill. This keeps grain spread out evenly for cleaner grain samples.

You get full performance on slopes up to 20%, without the big expense of a hillside combine.

Dairy Tips By Dr. Randy Lyle, Ph.D.

Purina Mills Dairy Consultant

High Fat Rations For Dairy Cows

High producing dairy herds across the country have several things in common, examples being good management, high quality forages, and high dry matter intakes. Another common factor is feeding high fat rations. A national survey by Texas A&M University showed that over 60% of top DHI producing U.S. herds feed high fat rations.

Why feed high fat rations to dairy cows? Fat is the most energy-dense ingredient available, and energy is the nutrient that is most likely to limit peak milk yield and optimum breeding efficiency. There are many sources of fat for use in dairy rations, with the major ones being high oil seeds (e.g. soybeans, whole cottonseed), tallow (animal origin), and dry fats.

Cost, availability, quality, ease of use, palatability and response all determine which type of fat source is best for your herd.

Purina Mills has researched high fat dairy rations for over 20 years. In addition, we have marketed high fat products since the mid 70's. Our knowledge of use of fats continues to increase. We know that fat is just one important part of the total "nutrient package" fed to high producing cows.

There are strict guidelines that must be followed when feeding high fat rations. Simply adding fat to a feed can create more problems than benefits. Our research and field experience has taught us how to use fat as a high performance ingredient in our premium dairy products. Those of you who have recently visited the Purina Mills Dairy Research Center, in Gray Summit, Missouri, have seen for yourselves the extensive work we are doing to expand our understanding of dairy nutrition. We will continue to develop higher performance dairy products that will help you meet your goals.
